Murphy, McKitka Charged

SURREY (CP) — Ed McKitka, former mayor of this Vancouver suburb, was charged with 16 criminal offences late Friday after a massive two-year investigation by the RCMP's commercial crime squad.

Ed Murphy, a CJOR radio talk show host, and Vancouver businessman Douglas Holme were charged with conspiring to offer Environment Minister Jim Nielsen a benefit in relation to land in the provincial agricultural land reserve.

Altogether, eight people were charged with a total of 33 offences Friday.

Police said all charges of possession of stolen property against others involve jewels worth $200,000 stolen in robberies in France.

The jewels were found in a Vancouver area home in December, 1977, when the Vancouver-based commercial crime squad raided more than 100 homes and businesses, in connection with alleged land speculation and bribery.

Hundreds of documents were seized and it has taken detectives nearly a year to sift through them.

Seven of the accused have been ordered to appear in court later this month. The eighth, developer Steven McGuire, was arrested and held in RCMP cells on charges of receiving a secret commission, one count of fraud, one count of conspiracy to possess stolen property, and one count of conspiracy to commit fraud.

McKitka, Surrey's mayor for two years until defeated last November, is accused of eight counts of breach of trust while mayor, four counts of demanding a benefit while mayor, one count of deceitfully influencing a municipal official, one count of conspiracy to commit fraud, one of fraud, and one of theft of property worth more than $200.

Developer Walter Link is charged with nine offences—two counts of conspiracy to commit fraud, two of fraud, one of conspiracy to commit a breach of trust of the mayor's office in Surrey, two counts of possession of stolen property, and two counts of conspiracy to possess stolen property. His wife Patricia faces two counts of possession of stolen property.

Two others, Vancouver businessmen Dwight Erickson and Harry Presley, were charged with conspiracy to possess stolen property.

Murphy and Holme are scheduled to make their first court appearances in Richmond provincial court Oct. 25, while the others, except McGuire, are due in court Oct. 20

$1,750 Drinking Fine

What is believed to be the highest drinking-driving fine in Victoria provincial court history was levied Friday by Judge William Ostler.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court the offence took place May 2 at about 11:50 p.m. when a Colwood RCMP officer spotted Mullen's vehicle shooting across traffic coming out of McDonald's Restaurant on the Old Island Highway and speeding past the police vehicle in the opposite direction and in a turning lane.

Anthony also told the court Mullen was convicted of impaired driving Oct. 23, 1975, when he was fined $300, and convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Nov. 3, 1976, and fined $400.

Defence-lawyer Richard Isaacs said his client had been involved in drinking with high school buddies on all three occasions.

Mullen, who is employed at the Syncrude tar sands plant at Fort McMurray, was also placed on six months probation.

It's Thumbs Down on Women When Manual Jobs Concerned

MUNICH (UPI) — When it comes to blue collar work, men like to think women are clumsy. Now a Munich doctor says this theory isn't all male chauvinism — the female thumb is shorter and mostly less efficient.

Dr. Karl Juritza's findings have sparked a controversy over equal opportunity for women in technical training.

Asked to report on the possibilities of training women as fitters, mechanics and electricians, Juritza told Munich's Christian Social Union city government that women were not physically suited to such work, because — among other reasons — they have shorter thumbs than men.

"The female body is on average 10 per cent shorter than that of the man," Juritza wrote in a five-page document on the "unchangeable differences of build and function" between men and women.

"The woman has shorter arms than the man, the thumb on the female hand is shorter, the index finger longer, and the woman has shorter legs than the man."

The Christian Socialists accepted Juritza's verdict and kept the women firmly under their longer thumbs by cancelling a $425,000 grant for 30 technical apprenticeships for women.

Their action provoked fierce criticism from the Social Democrat opposition, trade unions and women's groups.

Members of the Union of Social Democratic Women pointed their long index fingers at the Christian Socialist men, shaken by what they called "their hostility toward women and lack of interest in the employment problems of girls and women."

The women reminded Mayor Erich Kiesl in a letter of the words of his fellow Christian Socialist, Bavarian employment minister Fritz Pirkl, who advised women recently that they would benefit from a career outside an office.

Carmen Koenig, a Social Democrat candidate for the Bavarian parliament, threatened to test the "strength" of the Munich decision in a court case.

The Bavarian battle of female wits vs. manly strength is not new. Technical training for women has been a provocative issue in many West German local governments — both conservative, as in Munich, and liberal, as in the northern port of Bremen.

A clause in the 1949 constitution prescribes equal rights for men and women in West Germany, but a glance at the technical professions suggests men have blocked out women almost entirely.

Bank Rate Boost to 10.25% Seen as Gov't Desperation

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition critics greeted Friday's move by the Bank of Canada to increase the bank rate to an historical high of 10.25 per cent as a sign of government desperation to rescue the sinking dollar.

The central bank announced Friday evening after the close of stock and money markets that the bank rate, which is used as a base for chartered banks in determining their interest rates, would go up by three quarters of a per cent, its largest increase this year, effective Monday.

This was the fifth time this year the central bank has increased its rate, which stood at a post-war high of 9.5 per cent before the latest increase. The new rate of 10.25 per cent is the highest the bank has ever set since it was created in 1935.

The chartered banks normally keep their prime lending rate, which they offer only their most creditworthy customers — corporate giants such as General Motors Ltd. — about three quarters of a per cent above the bank rate.

Mortgage rates are normally one or two percentage points above the prime rate and consumer lending rates are a few percentage points higher.

"Experience has shown that increasing the bankrate only increases the cost of consumer and small business loans, escalating mortgage rates and making homes more difficult to buy," said a spokesman for the New Democratic Party.

"This is madness in economic policy. They've already tried this tactic four times this year and it obviously has had a negligible effect on the dollar. Why don't they ever learn?"

He said the increase in the bankrate would cripple the economic recovery the government badly needs. Businessmen, faced with high interest rates, will leave their money in the bank instead of investing it in expanding their plants and creating new jobs, the spokesman predicted.

Progressive Conservative MP Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton) said the bankrate increase was a poor substitute for new federal budget.

"They can't hang back and

UNITED WAY RUNNER Al Howie (right) is awarded trophy recognizing his epic run to Port Hardy, a distance of 600 kilometres, which is the equivalent of 17 consecutive marathons. Presenting trophy is Bob Harvey, campaign vice chairman. Howie also holds wooden sculpture presented to him by Port Hardy artist Franz Pfitzer when he arrived at the northern tip of Vancouver Island. Howie is considering another spectacular run to encourage people to give to United Way. He doesn't know yet how much his first run earned in pledges.

Postal Union Predicts A Long, Tough Strike

Times News Services

Postal union leaders in Quebec are predicting a long, tough strike in spite of federal threats of back-to-work legislation.

The crunch comes Monday when the Canadian Union of Postal Workers will have a mandate from members to call a national strike and the government will introduce a bill to order them back to work if they are off the job.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne threatened the back-to-work bill Friday.

The government held off the introduction of the bill until Monday to give a new negotiating effort between the union and Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet a chance to work.

While Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member CUPW, accepted the labor department's intervention he criticized the government's swift move for threatening back-to-work legislation.

Parrot met Ouellet briefly Friday afternoon and agreed to talk again Monday after consulting his union.

Hamburger Soon $2 A Pound

TORONTO (CP) — Supermarket officials say the price of imported beef and shoppers' increasing demand for cheaper cuts of beef will soon push the price of lean hamburger meat over $2 a pound.

Hamburger prices rose .9 per cent last month even though beef prices in Canada dropped 1.3 per cent, the Consumer Price Index shows. During the last year, beef prices have risen 43.7 per cent while hamburger prices have increased 53.9 per cent.

Hamburger meat is made from some cuts of Canadian cattle as well as boneless beef imported from Australia and New Zealand. This week, regular hamburger costs $1.38 a pound, compared with $1.78 for lean hamburger.

Norm Riddell, vice-president of meat operations at Loblaws Ltd., said hamburger prices will continue to rise to more than $2 a pound for lean meat by next year.

"Hams and poultry are very popular at this time of year so it will relieve some of the pressure on beef prices," he said. "It will stabilize for a while, but it will be back up after Christmas."

Ruth Jackson, a vice-president of the Consumers' Association of Canada, said the fast-food market is increasing the demand for hamburger meat.

Phone Calls Hiked

OTTAWA (CP) — Interprovincial long-distance telephone calls made through B.C. Tel will cost more — at least temporarily — beginning Sunday, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announced Friday.

The commission temporarily approved rate increases sought by B.C. Tel, Bell Canada and Canadian National Telecommunications for calls between areas served by two different telephone companies.

The areas affected are B.C. — operated by B.C. Tel, Ontario, Quebec, and the Eastern Arctic — operated by Bell and Newfoundland — operated by CNT.

In July, the federal regulatory agency granted Bell Canada, the country's largest telephone company, rate increases for monthly charges and long-distance calls within its own territory. Those increases were expected to give the company an additional $248-million in revenue next year.

Then in August, the commission decided to postpone another decision concerning applications by Bell and the other two companies to institute major inter-jurisdictional long-distance rate hikes. Instead, the CRTC launched a major inquiry into trans-Canada telephone rates and operations.

This latest decision means that long-distance rate increases begin on Sunday but final approval for the change will be subject to the outcome of that inquiry which, is not expected to be completed before late next year.

The three companies were also allowed to increase — at least temporarily — some customer dialed rates by six cents a minute and to reduce others by the same amount.

Big Tax Break For City Tourist Industry

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Qualifying Victoria hotels, motels and trailer parks will have their property assessments reduced by 40 per cent next year — creating savings of $12,000 to $16,000 for large establishments.

The announcement by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was praised by spokesmen for the hospitality industry today.

"Our property taxes were $28,000 this year. A 40 per cent reduction would save us $11,200."

Another motel owner said his taxes were $40,000 and the new policy could save $16,000 next year.

Wolfe Friday announced the property tax assessment rate will be reduced to 15 per cent from 25 per cent for qualifying businesses.

This has the effect of lowering the assessment by 40 per cent.

To qualify, a hotel, motel, trailer court or resort must either close or offer long-term accommodation for at least 150 days — five months — of the year.

Under assessment rules introduced this year, residential properties are assessed at 15 per cent of actual value while commercial properties are assessed at 25 per cent.

The minister has declared that any tourist-oriented accommodation that has a short season can declare itself, in effect, a residential property for taxation purposes if it either offers long-term accommodation or closes during the off-season.

Wolfe said the tax relief is in recognition of the short time the business operated on a daily rental basis.

The change applies to all qualifying hotels, motels, trailer parks, recreational vehicle parks, campgrounds and resorts in the province.

Only accommodation that is closed or converted to long-term rentals for at least 150 days — five months — qualifies for the 15 per cent rate.

Assessment rates in 1979 will continue to be 15 per cent of actual value for residential properties and 25 per cent for commercial establishments, other than those exempted by the new regulation.

Industrial property assessments are based on 30 per cent of actual value.

"My colleagues and I are very much aware of both the difficulties our tourist industry has experienced in recent years and the need to ensure a healthy economic environment for small business enterprises," the minister said.

Cardinals Closeted

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church prayed for guidance today and then were locked inside the Apostolic Palace to begin their second secret conclave in less than two months to choose a new pope.

The red-robed cardinals filed into the Sistine Chapel singing the Latin hymn Veni Creator (Come God Creator) that God may inspire them to choose the right man to govern the church. Until they make their choice, they will be sequestered inside the chapel area.

After filing in under the chapel's famous Michelangelo frescoes, the cardinals took their places at the long wooden tables where they will begin voting Sunday.

The prelates earlier jointly celebrated the Pro Eligendo Papa mass in St. Peter's Basilica — the liturgy for electing the pope.

A Town In Despair Over Two Little Boys Lost

HOUSTON (CP) — This northern British Columbia town was in despair today after failing late Friday to locate two five-year-old boys missing since Wednesday afternoon in dense bush country about 18 kilometres south of here.

"Everyone is feeling pretty down at this point," said RCMP Const. Dale Djos.

The boys, David Crocker and Jamie Baxter, wandered away from the Crocker home on a rural gravel link to the town, while their mothers were visiting after school.

Several hundred volunteer searchers — some of whom have come in busloads from towns many kilometres away — resumed the hunt at daybreak today.

The search has become the great social equalizer with bankers, loggers, lawyers, teachers, service station operators, housewives, high school students and truckers all tramping side-by-side over rough terrain.

Two helicopters, dispatched by Northwood Pulp Ltd. and Okanagan helicopters, flew over the hilly bushland broken only by marshes.

Northwood and the other major employer in town, Houston Forest Products, shut down their operations so employees could join the search. Logging trucks stood abandoned by drivers and stores were all but empty Friday.

Scores of women from church groups and service clubs co-ordinated a "sandwich brigade" to feed hungry searchers whose numbers reached 400 Friday and are expected to be greater today.

Norm Gautron, co-ordinator for the Provincial Emergency Program, said response to the search has been overwhelming and that he had to turn down 100 people Friday because the search was already organized.

"Everybody is saying, 'It could be my kid' and 'It's the neighborly thing to do," said Mary Ann Ruiter, manager of the community's weekly newspaper, Houston Today.

Gautron said there were too many factors involved to predict the boys' chances of survival.

"It's hard to say," he said. "It depends whether they got wet the first night . . . if they found a tree to stay under they have a good chance."

One of the boys was dressed in a down coat and boots an the other in a heavy cardigan. Temperatures dropped below freeezing Wednesday and Thursday and there was a light snowfall mixed with rain Thursday. The weather remained cool Friday.

New Bride Flees Czechs

VANCOUVER (CP) Danny Zitka flew into the arms of his new bride at Vancouver airport this week after her escape from behind the Iron Curtain.

Zitka, a 48-year-old Czechoslovakian-born Canadian, met Eva Dlabacova when he returned to Czechoslovakia in 1971 to visit his dying mother.

Eva was working in the hospital and the two were introduced. She is a doctor of philosophy and psychology and a member of an aristocratic Czechoslovakian family. This spring, after Zitka's wife had died and Eva had been divorced, the two were brought together again by Zitka's uncle.

After numerous letters — sometimes three a day — Eva flew here in August to stay at Zitka's home in suburban Surrey. They were married shortly after.

Eva still had to get her 12-year-old son, Michael, out of Czechoslovakia but the Czechoslovakian Communist government doesn't recognize Western weddings.

While her application for landed immigrant status was being cleared in Canada and Czechoslovakia, the Czechoslovakian consulate in Montreal was making it difficult.

The consulate wanted Zitka, who had fled Czechoslovakia after the Second World War, to pay a high fee to make legal his leaving Czechoslovakia.

Zitka said he had no money to pay the fee.

Eva decided to risk never seeing her country again by telling Czechoslovakian authorities her country's consulate in Montreal had approved her exit visa and she flew here with her son.

She said Friday she never thought she would make it out of the Czechoslovakia, particularly when the plane was delayed eight hours at Prague due to fog.

"Every minute was torture," she said. "I thought that state police would come on board and arrest us at any moment — I was so relieved when we took off."

The Montreal consulate could refuse to rubber-stamp her visa forcing her to stay or leave, but Eva said she has already decided to do "everything legally but I will stay with my husband."

Eva plans to learn more English and to take up her profession in Canada while Danny works in a Surrey plywood plant.

He plans to take the two on a holiday Sunday.

"I can't describe how I feel — I love Eva, that's the important thing," he said.

RCMP Hearings Set On Collision Course

OTTAWA (CP) — The McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing set itself on a collision course with the government Friday, declaring it alone will decide whether cabinet documents about the force should be made public.

At the same time Prime Minister Trudeau was telling 1,100 high school students that the cabinet alone will decide which documents the commission can see, the commission firmly rejected that argument.

"It is for the commission, and not for any other authority to decide," Mr. Justice David McDonald of Alberta said in a hearing called specially to deliver his decision in this dispute with the government.

He repeated that "the general principle guiding the commission will be the desirability of hearing evidence in public."

Trudeau, at a question-and-answer session while campaigning for former Liberal cabinet minister Bryce Mackasey in Ottawa Centre, said "I don't feel that the public has a right to know everything."

He reiterated his government's position that any commission hearings dealing with "confidential government papers" must be held behind closed doors. "That has been our position from the outset and that will remain our position."

The commission is independent of the government and cannot be directed by a minister or even by the cabinet, McDonald said. The only way the government could limit the commission's mandate to investigate illegal RCMP activities is by issuing a new order-in-council specifically prohibiting it from investigating certain areas, he said.

Government lawyers Joseph Nuss and Michel Robert, who argued before the commission last week, would not say whether the government is considering this type of action.

They refused to discuss what steps, if any, the government might take.

Spokesmen for Justice Minister Otto Lang and Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais said the ministers will study the judge's decision this weekend before making any comment.

Nuss and Robert argued last week that if the solicitor-general says making certain evidence public would harm national security, the commission has to accept his word.

The commission's interpretation of its mandate is that "it is for the commission to reach its own conclusion." The three commissioners said they would give "careful consideration and substantial weight" to any reasonable arguments made by cabinet ministers, but "the decision of the minister is not conclusive."

The commission heard legal arguments last week in preparation for calling as witnesses senior RCMP and security service officers and cabinet ministers beginning Oct. 24.

McDonald said the arguments of Nuss and Robert took the commission by surprise because they contradicted statements made by Francis Fox, who was solicitor-general when the commission was set up.

Fox told the Commons last November that "the chairman and members of that commission have all the powers required to look at an illegal act, if there is one, and to follow the nexus all the way up to wherever it leads." There were no fetters on the commission's right to investigate.

Thalidomide Baby Becomes a Mother

GRIMSBY, England (AP) — An 18-year-old thalidomide victim born without arms gave birth Friday to a normal baby girl. Mrs. Elaine Dale and her 8-pound-4-ounce daughter Sarah were "doing well" at Nunsthorpe Maternity Hospital, a spokesman said.

Mrs. Dale said she has used a life-sized doll to practise changing diapers with her feet. She has learned to cook, clean and write with her feet.

She is the second British thalidomide victim to become a mother, said the Thalidomide Trust, which aids victims of the drug. The first birth 18 months ago was kept secret at the family's request.

The drug thalidomide, a sedative produced by a West German firm, was distributed in West Germany, Britain, United States, Canada, Australia and several other countries between 1958 and 1961. It was found to have disastrous effects when taken by pregnant women, and the babies of many who took thalidomide were born without limbs or with other deformities.

A long court battle with the drug's British distributors, Distillers Co., resulted in settlements with about 350 families. Other dissatisfied parents still seek compensation.

Mrs. Dale, whose maiden name is Hufton, went to public school and became the first British thalidomide victim to pass a driving test. She used a specially adapted car with foot controls.

Slender Line Keeping Beirut Truce

BEIRUT (UPI) — A slender line of Lebanese army troops separated Syrian troops and Christian militiamen in Beirut today but sniper fire continued to threaten the truce and lend urgency to renewed Arab efforts to settle the crisis.

Some 600 troops hastily mustered from the remants of Lebanon's pre-civil war army took up positions Friday in a narrow buffer zone between Syrian artillery and Christian gunmen in eastern Beirut.

An army spokesman sought to stress their authority by denying that "their main role was that only of a buffer force.

"The main importance of our role is not to form a limited buffer between forces. We are an army. We are here, quite simply, to ensure peace," he said.

But it was a peace the "reconstituted army" was ill-equipped to keep, being vastly outmanned and outgunned by both of the sides they were keeping apart.

CRUSHED KARPOV ASKS FOR DELAY

The Korchnoi victory threw the match into sudden death at five games apiece, with each player needing one more victory for the title.

SYNANON BEATING CLAIMS PROBED BY CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California attorney general's office has begun an investigation into the beatings of at least 15 "enemies" of Synanon, following a rattlesnake attack on a lawyer who said he was threatened by the mysterious group.

In another development, Lance Kenton, 20, son of bandleader Stan Kenton, was released on $25,000 bail Friday, one day after he was arrested on suspicion of planting a rattlesnake in the attorney's mailbox.

Joseph Musica, 28, arrested with Kenton on a ranch 200 miles north of Los Angles, remained in custody.

Both are members of Synanon, originally a drug and alcoholism therapy group which has become grown increasingly unusual and controversial in recent years. Former Synanon members said Musico and Kenton were both members of "the imperial marines," a Synanon paramilitary force.

Attorney Paul Morantz, who was severely bitten Tuesday by a 4½-foot rattlesnake planted in his mailbox, was reported in good condition at the Los Angeles County-USC Medical Centre. Doctors said he probably would be released sometime during the weekend.

Morantz, 32 who said he was on a Synanon "hit list," won a $300,000 judgment against Synanon last month and has represented persons accusing Synanon of kidnapping and other offenses in past and pending legal actions against the group."

The attorney general's office said Friday its Organized Crime and Criminal Intelligence Branch has launched a statewide investigation into complaints of beatings by 15 persons, former Synanon members or others, who said they are considered enemies of the group.

A Justice Department spokesman said investigators "are dealing with a number of very frightened people."

Former Synanon executive Phil Ritter was hospitalized in critical condition after a severe beating by two men armed with clubs outside his home in Berkeley, Calif., three weeks ago. Police said an ex-member in Los Angeles complained he then received an anonymous note reading: "Did you hear what happened to Phil Ritter?"

While one investigation deals primarily with reports of violence, another is examining Synanon's financial affairs, the department said.

The non-profit, tax-exempt foundation has reported assets of $20 million, with extensive property holdings in Marin County, Santa Monica and Badger in Tulare County.

Kremlin Lashes 'Slander'

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda launched a blistering personal attack on U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon today, accusing him of slandering the Soviet Union during his American speaking tour.

The Communist party newspaper took issue with various remarks Toon made, including references to racism in Soviet society and microwave bombardment of the U.S. embassy.

"One thing is clear: diplomat Toon conducts himself extremely undiplomatically," Pravda said. "What he is doing is not to the credit of this extraordinary and plenipotentiary ambassador."

Cambodians Offer Inspection by UN

Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — The Cambodian government, which has frequently been accused of killing hundreds of thousands of its own people, Friday offered to open its borders to Western observers to counter charges of massive human rights violations.

The offer was made by Ieng Sary, the Cambodian foreign minster, who is currently visiting the United Nations. Leng Sary said that UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has been invited to visit Democratic Kamuchea, as Cambodia has been known since the Communists gained power three years ago, to "see with his own eyes" whether the charges are valid.

The foreign mnister also said that the Cambodian government may allow American journalists to visit Cambodia later this year.

A spokesman for Waldheim said the secretary general had not decided whether he will accept the Cambodian invitation. The spokesman cited Waldheim's heavy schedule and his refusal to travel during the General Assembly session that ends in December.

The new willingness of the Cambodians to talk freely about their country seems to stem from the strong international criticism that has been leveled during the past year at the extreme policies of Cambodia.

Documents submitted to a UN subcommittee by the Human Rights Commission, the United States, Great Britain and Canada have accused Cambodia of violating almost every article of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948.

Estimates of the numbers of Cambodians who have died because of starvation, overwork and executions range from hundreds of thousands to more than threemillion and are based on refugee accounts. Teng Sary denied such charges Friday but said that some Cambodians have been killed because they were "infiltrators and agents of the Vietnamese or U.S. imperialists."

The Vietnamese have accused Cambodia of fomenting the months-long border war between the two countries, and have invited Western journalists to the Vietnamese front. Leng Sary Friday said that the Vietnamese started the war.

"We are inviting you journalists to our country not to mobilize opinion against Vietnam," Ieng Sary contended Friday. "We want you to see for yourself whether there are human rights violations." The Cambodians have repeatedly denied charges of such violations.

"It is a very welcome invitation to the United Nations," a spokesman said.

Filching Lottery Funds

The NDP charge that Social Credit is using the provincial lottery fund as a slush fund to help out MLAs in need is a little farfetched, but what the government has been doing lately with lottery proceeds is a long way from what the legislation allows.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy's $100,000 handout from the fund for a foot bridge in Coquitlam (George Kerster's narrowly-held riding) might be squeezed in under the specific definition in the Lotteries Act for spending the profits — "cultural or recreational purposes or for preserving the cultural heritage of the province" — although the clear intention at the time lotteries were organized in Canada was to fund sports and recreation facilities, to help underwrite organized teams and athletes.

But the filching of $200,000 from the lottery fund to buy smoke detectors for private nursing homes, announced recently by Attorney-General Garde Gardom, is clearly not what was intended by the people who framed the legislation five years ago, nor is it what the public expected.

Smoke detectors are lifesavers, but what is the government doing buying them for private nursing home operators, and out of lottery funds? If the government thinks they are necessary, the nursing homes should be required to lay out the $100 or so to equip their establishments.

This is definitely an expenditure of lottery funds that the act does not allow. The province's chief law officer should know that. Former provincial secretary Ernie Hall stressed at the time the province looked into lotteries that a provincial scheme definitely would be intended to benefit sports, recreation and cultural programs.

It is a bad precedent to take money from a highly undependable source and spend it on anything other than "frills" which can be cut back or jettisoned entirely in time of austerity. Spending it on capital projects of the kind outlined above is not wise.

Politics in the Cat Box

The more we hear from the conservative forces in Vancouver's race for civic office, the more it seems they deserve nothing more from the voters than a saucer of milk and a scratching post. That or an extended run at a burlesque comedy house, preferably in another town. As the catfight moves from tragedy to slapstick and back again and the Non-Partisan Association candidates switch from scratching out each other's eyes and attacking their opponents, the voter is left to choose not between good and bad, but simply between nonsense and reason.

The chief actor in the present scenario is incumbent mayor Jack Volrich, who some say doesn't know the time of day despite his fondness for watches. Volrich, remember, reached his current position two years ago as the middle-of-the-road choice of The Electors Action Movement. But his subsequent lack of action in some areas and imprudent action in others led simply to a "Get out — I'm leaving" exchange between the mayor and his backers. Not to be held back, Volrich is this week the candidate for TEAM's arch-foe, the NPA.

That wasn't really in the game plan. NPA's nominating committee had already selected a standard-bearer in former mayor Bill Rathie, a relic from Vancouver's booming 1960s. But when the smoke cleared at the nominating meeting Tuesday, Rathie had been sandbagged and Volrich was wandering about saying, in effect, "Who, me? I'm so surprised."

Considering the meeting chairman suggested that Volrich orchestrated the whole performance and that the mayor's beady-eyed Svengali Ald. George Puil and sidekick Ald. Warnett Kennedy were playing first and second fiddles, Volrich's astonishment can be taken with a pound of salt. Rathie, understandably upset, accused the mayor of being "chicken" and swore to run for office anyway. That lasted about a day before Rathie himself chickened out of the entire contest.

The principal benefactor of this brawl is TEAM's choice, Ald. May Brown. It is doubtful that Kennedy's witty epithets — he called her a "praying mantis," "the pink lady," and "the leader of that left-wing bunch" — will do her serious harm. Although she was a reluctant candidate and relented only when it seemed certain Rathie would siphon off much of Volrich's support, she is now the only reasonable choice and Rathie's disappearance may not prove fatal. After all, Mrs. Brown's chief ally is the NPA and there is certainly time enough before the vote for that party to complete its self-destruction.

Mom and the Noose

Provincial Conservatives promise a whingding of a convention this weekend in Richmond, with leader Vic Stephens outlining his "tax revolt" platform in detail for party members preparing to fight an election soon.

Convention organizer Klaus Berger says it will be the best ever Tory meeting. "We are deliberately staying away from the good old apple pie things like the death penalty and all this kind of nonsense that is always bugging everybody," he said.

An original way of putting it. And it's good, too, to see the Conservatives manfully resisting all those cheap shots. High-minded, they are.

RICHARD GWYN

Canada No Common Market

OTTAWA — During an interview in Brussels last summer, Marcel Cadieux, our ambassador to the European Economic Community, dropped upon me the provocative comment that "probably there are now fewer barriers to trade among the countries of Europe than among the provinces of Canada."

Cadieux was making a personal guess, rather than a considered judgment. Most of the experts I've talked to since, though, believe that he was right.

Think about it. Ten provinces within a single country have managed to build up more barriers to the free movement of goods, people and trade between them than have the nine independent nations of the EEC.

Balkanized Market

Think as well about the fact that at the same time as we worry about being almost the only industrial nation without free access to a market of at least 400 million, we have managed to balkanize our trivial domestic market of 23 million more throughly than the western European market of 240 million.

A couple of examples to prove the point. To drive a truck from Victoria to Halifax takes more paperwork than to drive it from Dublin to Hamburg. A British doctor, say, can more easily transfer his practice to Belgium or to Italy than can a Nova Scotia doctor, say, to Ontario or British Columbia. The same is true for nurses, architects, public notaries and dentists, all of which have been "harmonized" within Euorpe.

"Comparisons between Canada and Europe at this instant don't matter much," says University of Toronto economist Ed Safarian. It matters a great deal that we are moving toward fragmentation while Euorpe is moving toward integration."

Safarian worries that Canada is subdividing itself into 10 "mini-markets." He cites provincial purchasing policies which discriminate in favor of companies located within the province, and Quebec's demand that insurance companies (like Sun Life) match their investments in the province to the premiums collected there.

The British North America Act did not, despite the popular presumption, create a "Canadian common market." Our constitution requires only that goods from one province "shall be admitted free" into all other provinces. This clause prohibits provincial tariffs. As in international trade, though, tariffs are far less important today than non-tariff barriers.

British Columbia, for instance, imposes a 50 per cent markup on Ontario wines, as against a 40 per cent markup on its own home brews. To be licensed to work in Ontario, a Manitoba auto mechanic has to spend six months there, either idling or working illegally.

The best list of provincial non-tariff barriers to trade that's available is that compiled in 1977 for the Ontario Economic Council by University of Toronto law professor Michael Trebilcock. It's only a partial list, but it is a long one.

Wine marketing. Egg marketing boards. Government purchasing policies. Transportation regulations. Securities regulations. Combined regulations, which hinder extraprovincial business amalgamations. Land ownership limitations (Saskatchewan and P.E.I.). Welfare assistance regulations. Student loan rules. Occupational licensing, like that for auto mechanics. The professions, from lawyers to pharmacists.

Each year, the barriers mount. Each province legislates in new areas, like consumer credit, in isolation from the others. "Canada has an extremely weak record of commitment to uniformity of legislation relative to other federal states, such as the U.S. and Australia," writes Trebilcock.

The current case in the news is the Ontario-Quebec war over construction workers and companies, which affects Newfoundland as well. After peace talks failed, Ontario demanded that Ottawa refer the issue to the Supreme Court for a ruling. Ottawa, to Ontario's annoyance, has failed to act. For a very good reason. "There's about an 80-per-cent chance that the (Quebec) legislation is constitutional," says Federal-Provincial Relations Minister Marc Lalonde.

Truck Licences

"Ontario and Quebec, and Newfoundland," Lalonde adds, "are going to have to agree among themselves on this one." There's the rub about the only thing the provinces seem able to agree on is to disagree with the federal government. Standardized truck licences were on the agenda of the first premiers' conference in 1964 and were never dealt with. Standardized truck licences were on the agenda of last summer's Regina meeting of the premiers, and were never dealt with.

Ottawa's proposals for constitutional changes include a clause that would give all Canadians the right, for the first time, to "move into" any province and immediately acquire all rights of residents, and to "acquire and hold property" in any province. About this proposal the premiers, so far, have been silent. It would be nice to believe that this silence signifies consent. It doesn't. It signifies indifference.

W.A. WILSON

Joe's Road to Success

OTTAWA — Amid the flashy and often highly entertaining slanging match that opened the throne speech debate in the Commons, the Conservative leader made a determined attempt to answer the question on many Canadian minds: Is Joe Clark an acceptable alternative?

By common consent, he delivered a well-constructed speech that had the obvious, but under the partisan circumstances, desirable anti-government content. Its meat went beyond that, however, and included a sketch of the course that a Conservative government would hope to follow.

To many people reading the speech, the answer to the question Clark was seeking to answer, probably would be: Well, why not? The doubts about the Conservative leader's possible capacity as prime minister do not stem from the policy content of what he says but from intangibles. These are usually summed up simply by saying that he has not caught on with the public or that he lacks impact.

Lacks Impact

This is a serious disadvantage because, when he is in form, Pierre Trudeau is a very high impact man. He was during the Thursday slanging match, delivering a brilliant essay in ridicule that brought his discouraged followers to their feet.

The most pertinent question about this opening debate is almost impossible to answer because it involves the subjective reactions of a mass of people. The question, however, is clear: Have things perhaps gone past the point where it is politically productive for Trudeau to ridicule Clark, however brilliantly?

When a government is new its opposition always has to exercise care in attacking it, because of the number of people who have just voted for it and because the citizen always has a vested interest in the success of a newly elected government. Unless a brilliant political debater can completely destroy an opponent through ridicule and condemnation, something of the same sort in all probability applies when large numbers of people are trying to make up their minds about the future government of their country.

It may be that many people in the country already know as well as they want to that Trudeau can be a master of ridicule. To have the knowledge reinforced by one more demonstration of his mastery of that art may not remove the doubts they have acquired about the quality of his government and leadership. This new session of Parliament is likely to be a testing time for politicians because the public almost certainly will be looking to see where they find acceptable potential for government rather than reinforcement of knowledge they already have. If the government cannot impress the public more strongly with its capacity in its primary role, government, than it has been doing and if Clark does not succeed in presenting himself as an acceptable alternative, it is likely to be a very cynical electorate that goes to the polls next year.

. . . master of ridicule

Clark has certainly had an impact with his proposal that homeowners should be allowed deductions of mortgage interest from their income tax. A similar scheme is immensely popular in the United States and has not produced there the havoc its detractors gloomily predict here. By denouncing it as a scheme to benefit the rich the Liberals have probably been unwise because the country has an enormous number of home purchasers who are far from rich.

Moreover, the middle class is now very large in this country, since it takes in a great number of prosperous union members who some time ago would have been placed on the socio-economic scale as blue collar workers, somewhere between the middle class and the poor. One of the shrewder political defences of the proposal put forward by the Conservatives was the blunt, unqualified statement that it was intended to help "the hard-pressed middle class." The Liberals tend to look a little old hat in this argument, people who fail to appreciate the great socio-economic changes that have taken place in this country.

Clark has the problem of offering enough to make it seem worthwhile voting for him and his party, by those who want a change, without at the same time promising too much. At some point, long before people vote, the Conservative promises will be put through computers and when the printouts start they will be damaged if they have promised so many concessions that the inevitable consequence would be a significant increase in the already very high government deficit. Since the size of this deficit, and the question what it would be if the basis were exactly comparable to, say, 1975, is one of Clark's main targets, the Tories have indeed need for some care.

Cutting Costs

Any Ottawa-watcher would agree with Clark that there are ways in which the cost of government could be reduced: It is a wasteful process. To take one of the more glaring examples, the new Bank of Canada building down Wellington Street from the parliament buildings is a monument to waste. The federal aim to upgrade Hull was commendable in itself (although it evoked harsh criticism from many who lived there and were affected) but the monumental buildings across the river from Ottawa all involve far more costly government office space than the adequate quarters abandoned on this side of the river. There are dozens of examples.

Clark proposes stronger parliamentary committees. He would be wise to be very specific about one of them and outline precisely how he proposes to give the public accounts committee much sharper teeth. Then he should see to the necessary dental work during his first weeks in office — if he makes it — before he too has a vested interest in tameness.

Israel and Mideast

It is difficult to comment on the letters wich appear from time to time written by a Mr. Corrance on the subject of Israel and the Middle East. The difficulty lies in the fact that he simply repeats the time-worn cliches of anti-Israel propagandists with absolutely no responsibility to the truth or to logic and he does so, moreover, in language so coarse and aggressive that it is impossible not to suspect his self-proclaimed lack of bigotry.

The Jews have been a significant presence in Palestine since the days of Joshua. The Jewish state has a historical and legal validity that is far more impressive than, let us say, that of Jordan. The Arab refugees, for the most part, left Israel to participate in a war along with the Arab states which opposed the UN resolution.

No other refugee situation since the Second World War has been so prolonged. It appears that it is perpetuated deliberately by wealthy and underpopulated Arab states which long ago could have at least relieved considerably the plight of the refugees if not for their longing for a return to Palestine.

Thousands of Jews in Arab countries are daily suffering the humiliations of a subject people. The Christians of Lebanon are being exterminated by Syrian and PLO military activity. It could be useful to consider these facts in a balanced view of the Middle East. — E. Kaellis, 1291 Gladstone Avenue.

High Spending

It was in all the papers recently that the provincial government had a $140 million surplus but that's really only half of it.

In fact, provincial revenues exceeded what was estimated in the budget by a total of $225 million. The final balance was not so high because the budget was overspent.

Total budgetary revenue — the amount that the government took out of the taxpayers pockets — was over $4 billion. That is an increase of greater than $1 billion over the amount that was taken in in the last NDP year, just two years before.

The figures may be hard to accept, considering the constant Social Credit campaign for spending restraint on the part of federal and municipal governments and school boards, but actions speak louder than wor ts. When it comes to careful husbanding of the taxpayers dollars, the Social Credit motto is, "Do as I say, not as I do."

1974-75 (the last full NDP year)	$2,680,360,396
1975-76 (Socreds elected in Dec.)	$3,032,182,909
1977-78	$4,055,491,833

Those are the figures, and the most expensive public relations campaign in the world cannot wash them away or make them come out differently. They establish beyond doubt that the present government, far from practising the restraint that it preaches, is the highest-spending, highest-taxing government has ever seen.

The philosophy that the answer to every problem is to be found in government action, with the bill sent to the taxpayer, is still with us. If that is the sort of government British Columbians want, they have two political parties that have proved they will give it to them.

If, on the other hand, they have decided that they want to get government off their backs and out of their wallets — if they think that they can spend the money they earn more effectively than the politicians and bureaucrats can spend it, the Progressive Conservative offer that choice. — Vic Stephens, Leader, Conservative Party.

Objects to Book

I am writing about my concern over a book I happened on at the Colwood branch of the Vancouver Island regional library. The book is Sex For Women by Carmen Kerr. Let me say that I am all for books given to wholesome sex education being available to all ages in a public or school library.

My personal contention is that a book such as this, which condones and encourages homosexuality, lesbianism, promiscuity and extra-marital affairs as being normal, harmless, acceptable modes of behavior does nothing to promote healthy, wholesome attitudes toward sex. It only enhances the growing permissive attitudes taken by a large segment of our present society. The language and mood of this book cheapens and violates the sacredness of sex which is meant to be the beautiful, ultimate expression and experience of the fully committed love of a husband and wife.

I am not suggesting censorship, as part of maturity is having established for oneself a moral code of what's right or wrong and reading such material is not as likely to change or influence an adult's standards of behavior as it would the young person.

Even though this book is in complete opposition to my personal moral standards, it is not so much the book that I am disapproving of as its availability to any age level, namely, children and particularly young teenagers, who might be drawn to this book by its title. The librarian on duty informed me that there is no age restrictions on the borrowing of any books in the library, including one like this. I do not believe that a public or school library should be the place where teenagers will find such misguided sex information, as this would only serve to enhance the young person's growing acceptance of such behavior as being approved as healthy and normal by society — Mrs. Terry Fyfe, 3325 Lodmell Road.

Wanted: A National Television Policy to Redirect CBC

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Peter Kent's oral presentation to the Canadian Radio-televison and telecommunications Commission in Ottawa Tuesday was well done, and his responses to sometimes stupid questions from four or five of the commissioners was even better.

I wanted to see and hear Kent, of the CBC television news staff, in his appearance because I dislike the penchant we have in this country to be over-exercised when an employee criticizes his own company.

On the one hand, how dare he? On the other, brave hero, admirable, but of course they'll get him for it, won't they?

And then there's the joy most of us feel when an institutional mastodon gets criticism from a man to whom it must respond and does with a contained outrage. Witness the high dudgeon of CBC president Al Johnson, or Knowlton Nash, the TV news and public affairs supervisor.

I found Kent persistent rather than defiant. His poise was admirable, particularly when he made the true point that the current president of the CBC has had no background in broadcasting or in news and public affairs, that Johnson had been a civil servant all his working life until he got the presidency of the CBC. Kent believes such leadership makes the CBC vulnerable to political pressure from the highest levels.

Record calls

He didn't say: Away with ex-civil servants as CBC presidents. He insisted there should be instead an open and understood policy governing access by all political leaders to special appearances on national television.

He didn't blame the politicians for their pressure. There should be a system that records their calls and requests, and then deals with them, he said.

The easy access Pierre Trudeau has had to the CBC-TV network was a straightforward matter that could have been settled, says Kent, by a formula and openness.

The more important issues that Kent raised dealt with the priorities and the timing of the CBC's national news. In effect, Kent believes this is by long odds the most important work the CBC does — to gather and present each day a national newscast.

It's not to belittle Peter Kent or any of the many other interveners at the CRTC hearings to conclude, as I do, that the key questions about the CBC and its future won't be much influenced by what they have had to say. I would wager $1,000 to $1 that a CRTC chaired by the thoroughly bland Pierre Camu cannot reject the CBC's renewal application. And the odds are almost as long that the CRTC will not put any stern qualifications on the renewal that would amount to major redirections to the corporation.

Our experience, both in laws and regulations, with passenger train service and telegraph service remind us how terribly long it takes before the reality of redundancy sinks in. In the first case, buses, private cars and planes, and in the second case, telephones, teletype and electronic copying, steadily and thoroughly undercut the need for trains and telegraph service and ruined their earnings.

Redundant

TV is obvious. Technology in cable and satellite has made on-air telecasting redundant. And the sweep to diverse program choices for viewers is surely irreversible.

Yet the CBC still projects itself as much (or more) a massive on-air distribution system of one channel as a national, program production house.

And the CRTC still functions as a regulating authority in broadcasting as though the way things once were, and now are, always will be.

KENT
. . . criticizes bosses

The CBC's appearance before the CRTC is a ritual being carried out with seriousness by both parties and by the interveners. The word "mandate" is used a lot at the hearings. Of course, it comes from the acts passed by Parliament.

New techniques, popular trends and altering social values have been confusing the mandate of the CBC. And the mandate of the CRTC is now beyond what we can expect from an appointed commission. We need a new, national TV policy that faces the dilemma of all broadcasters, including the CBC's.

Of course, we're not going to get such a new policy for a long time. The political parties have other priorities.

French Leftists Taking Second Look

JONATHAN KANDELL
New York Times

PARIS — "Communist Vietnam, which won the war against the French and then against the Americans, is on the way to losing the peace," commented a recent editorial in a French newspaper. "The new tragedy that its people are living is not being caused this time by an imperialist power, but instead by the internal imperialism of a single party which prefers a police monologue to democratic debate."

The editorial would hardly raise eyebrows had it appeared in a conservative French publication. But the harshly anti-Communist commentary was printed in Le Monde, the leading French daily which for years has shown considerable sympathy for the Vietnamese Communist struggle.

With increasing frequency in recent months, the French leftist press and intellectuals are casting a sharply critical eye toward events in Indochina, Africa, the Middle East and elsewhere in the Third World.

The disillusionment with liberation movements abroad parallels the self-questioning that is going on within the left in France. The bitter relations between French Communists and Socialists — which probably cost them the chance to take over the government in elections last March — has led the non-Communist left to challenge traditional Marxist concepts like state ownership of industry, simple distinctions between capitalist oppressors and working class oppressed, and the authoritarianism of Marxist governments.

During the past two years, an influential group of young leftist intellectuals, called the New Philosophers, has developed a profound theoretical critique of Marxism. The central insistence of the group is that theory must take account of brutal reality and that the left is guilty not only of ignorance and cowardice but of complicity in refusing for so long to admit and challenge the truth of Marxist repression.

Although the publicity initially accorded to the New Philosophers has waned in recent months, many of their concepts have seeped into the commentaries of leftist politicians, intellectuals and journalists. This is particularly evident in French leftist discussions of Third World issues.

A few months ago, for example, when an Algerian woman, Dalila Maschino, was kidnapped in Canada and forcibly brought back to Algiers, the reaction here was one of outrage which led to an extended debate over the plight of women in Algeria — a country that has been covered sympathetically by the leftist press because of its long, painful struggle for independence from France.

For weeks, Le Novel Observateur, the leading leftist weekly magazine, ran a series of articles by intellectuals critical of political repression in the Third World.

"People say to me that my present disillusion matches my previous illusions," noted Jean-Pierre Le Dantec, former managing editor of an extreme left-wing newspaper, in the Nouvel Observateur series. "That is possible. But let me at least be granted the right to be lucid, the right to declare that one barbarity can be used to cover another one."

In a similar vein, Jacques Julliard, an editorialist for Nouvel Observateur and university professor, wondered whether the choice facing the French left was between "a capitalist Africa, corrupt, police-ridden and often bloody, and a so-called Socialist Africa, anarchic, tyrannical and no less bloody."

The most significant turnaround in French leftist views has emerged over Indochina. The Vietnamese war was an important rallying point for the French left in the 1960s and early 1970s, and served to channel public sympathy toward Third World struggles elsewhere. But press commentary now often underlines the harshly repressive policies of the new regime.

"Since May, 1975, the law that prevails in Vietnam concerning guarantees of human rights in general, and the fate of tens or hundreds of thousands of prisoners in particular is the law of silence. In Hanoi and in the former Saigon, any question on the subject is judged at best to be "unfriendly", and at worst as an intolerable "interference in the internal affairs of Vietnam."

French leftist attitudes toward events in Cambodia have been even more critical, at times reflecting remorse and guilt over previous sympathetic views.

"It is not by crying out 'I was mistaken' or 'I was fooled' or 'we did not know' that one can erase the consequences of a bloody dictatorship disguised in virtuous socialism," wrote Lacouture. "The evil is done."

The Guilt Tax

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Intentionally or not, every Canadian who sips a cocktail or quaffs a stein of ale is drinking to the health of the provincial and federal governments — the financial health. In 1977, the governments cleared $1.8 billion from alcohol excise taxes, import duties and net profits from their liquor outlets — up 46 per cent from the 1974 level. To make matters worse, about $500 million of that increase was due not to consumption, which rose by only 6.4 per cent since 1974, but to an increase in the governments' taxes, duties and profits.

Have outraged drinkers taken to the streets in protest? Have cobwebs settled in the liquor stores as infuriated consumers stay away in droves? Have the government revenues trailed off to a trickle?

Not a bit of it. Consumption proceeds apace, as does consumption of cigarettes, exotic foods and other luxuries which bear the full weight of mounting tariffs and arbitrary surcharges. Far from reacting with righteous indignation, the customer whose hackles would rise if eggs climbed to 97 cents a dozen from 94 remains mute in the presence of a can of lobster pate which jumps overnight by a couple of dollars. Flagellants all, we would rather pay penance for enjoying ourselves than be seen to haggle over something we are convinced is sinful.

The governments, after pioneering with the entertainment tax, have come up with the perfect weapon — the guilt tax. And feeling like naughty schoolboys caught smoking in the corridor, we fume, mutter, make silent vows to ourselves — and pay meekly, regularly, and through the nose.

The Name Game And the Plover

I was reminded of this little conundrum in bird names during my regular weekly call to Victoria's Rare Bird Alert (383-0211 on your dial) last weekend. Among other things, that call produced the information that an Upland Sandpiper had been seen at UVic. The "other things" included a Sabine's Gull — at Oak Bay, a Northern Shrike — at Victoria Golf Course, and a Roughlegged Hawk — also at UVic.

But it was the Upland Sandpiper that drew most of my interest.

Upland Sandpiper! Now there's a contradiction in terms. How can a bird be upland and still be a sandpiper? Sandpiper conjures up pictures of beaches and little long-legged birds skittering back and forth in the waves; upland — well that word conjures up pictures of anything but waves and beaches and skittering sandpipers.

Strangely, though, the two words come comfortably together in the Upland Sandpiper because the Upland Sandpiper is a legitimate sandpiper that lives in the "uplands" — particularly the great central plains of North America.

But, while the name Upland Sandpiper fits this medium-sized, long-legged bird of the plains, such was not always the case. Which brings me back to when is a plover not a plover.

Early in the last century, when ornithologists and near-ornithologists were charging all over North America — and most of the rest of the world for that matter — identifying and classifying the new birds they found, the Upland Sandpiper first appeared in the journals of Science, under the name Bartramian Sandpiper.

Early in this century, when I first began charging around the open countryside northwest of Winnipeg in search of "new" and exciting discoveries in birds, the name Upland Sandpiper first appeared in my notebook under the name Upland Plover.

And, as this century moves into its fourth quarter, birdwatchers are still charging all over the country looking at birds. Only now, when they see an Upland Sandpiper, they call it that — an Upland Sandpiper.

You may now have begun to suspect that the Bartramian Sandpiper, Upland Plover and Upland Sandpiper are one and the same bird. If so, you're right.

The name game for the Upland Sandpiper began more than 100 years ago when it received its first name, Bartramian Sandpiper, in honor of William Bartram, a sometime painter and engraver, sometime merchant, sometime plantation hand who, after repeated failures at the aforesaid endeavors, finally made his name as an artist and naturalist.

Bartramian Sandpiper hung on well into this century when, in response I suppose to the fact that the bird had become known colloquially as the Upland Plover, the official name was changed. But Upland Plover, like so many colloquial names, was a misnomer. The bird was an upland bird to be sure, but certain anatomical features, not apparent to the naked eye, denied it the name plover. And, until a couple of years ago - through most of my birding life — plover it remained.

But, in all those years, things were not quiet on the Bartramian Sandpiper front. While I was trying to untangle my confusion about the Bartramian Sandpiper and Upland Plover, the American Ornithologists Union — they set the standards for the names of North American birds — were getting ready to throw me another curve.

Recognizing the mistake made nearly 50 years ago, the AOU decided a couple of years ago to set the record right on several kinds of birds that were operating under assumed names. In a two-part edict that still has the Life Listers and Checklist composers talking to themselves, the AOU decreed — among other things — that the Upland Plover, henceforth and forthwith, should be known as the Upland Sandpiper.

Unfortunately, it took the AOU so long to untangle the mess that the name Upland Plover has become firmly established in the birdwatching jargon, and habit — even among birdwatchers — is hard to break. So it was when I heard that there was an Upland Sandpiper at UVic that my bird-name computer blew a fuse. It was some time before I was able to work my way through the name maze to Upland Plover. And despite the AOU, and despite the name being wrong, to me the Upland Sandpiper will always be the Upland Plover.

Confirm or Deny Telexes, Cossitt Challenges RCMP

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Tom Cossitt (Leeds) asked the government Friday to confirm or deny the legitimacy of Telexes alleging the RCMP infiltrated the Quebec government.

In the Commons, Cossitt referred to alleged RCMP security service internal Telexes, which he said showed the Mounties do not trust Prime Minister Trudeau's government.

Cossitt would not say whether he himself has copies of the Telexes, photocopies of which were mailed recently to at least three Canadian newspapers.

Cossitt said outside the Commons he was reluctant to comment because earlier this year the government threatened to prosecute him under the Official Secrets Act because he revealed in the Commons details of alleged Soviet spy rings.

The Telexes describe French espionage attempts to promote Quebec independence in the 1960s and the security service's counter-operation, codenamed Carte Blanche.

Cossitt told reporters he feels the Telexes are a genuine security service leak, although the government has not commented on their authenticity.

Telexes dated November and December, 1971, show the RCMP did not trust the federal government, Cossitt said.

They show that a Jean-Pierre Mongeau was feeding information on the Parti Quebecois to the Quebec cultural affairs minister, at that time a Liberal.

Cossitt did not know where the man got the informatinn, but said the Mounties were afraid he would give the same information to his bosses, then solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer and Marc Lalonde, who then was Trudeau's principle secretary and now is minister for federal-provincial relations.

Cossitt speculated that the Mounties saw no point in giving the information to Goyer because they had given valuable information to previous solicitors-general and it had not been acted upon.

The government has an obligation to confirm or deny the allegation (supported by the Telexes) that the RCMP was spying on the Parti Quebecois, which is "a legally constituted democratic party, whether we like it or not," Cossitt said.

'Decent' Firings Promised

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is investigating new ways to help public servants who will lose their jobs because of the government's economic restraint program, Treasury Board President Robert Andras said Friday.

In the Commons, he told Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) he can not give unequivocal guarantees that no public servants will lose their jobs. But he said the government will do everything it can to make any firings "as decent and painless as possible."

He reiterated earlier statements that public servants whose jobs are eliminated will have priority in getting other jobs in the public service.

Andras said in an interview that he is also considering retraining programs for laid-off public servants and paying for them to move to other cities where there are jobs.

He also rejected a suggestion from Gerard Laprise (SC—Abitibi) that the government abandon plans to lay off French teachers in government language schools.

These layoffs are not connected with the restraint program, he said. They are necessary because the government is phasing out language training by 1983.

The layoffs "have nothing to do with our continued commitment to bilingualism or national unity," Andras said.

A Decade Later. . . Rene Whips Frenzy

MONTREAL (CP) — In a church-basement setting reminiscent of the early days of the Parti Quebecois, Premier Rene Levesque whipped about 500 supporters into frenzied applause Friday with a call to approach the coming referendum on independence with certainty.

"We have to make liberation contagious," Levesque said in a fiery speech at a gathering to mark the 10th anniversary of the PQ's founding on Oct. 14, 1968.

"At no time during those 10 years did we lose the perspective that brought us together . . . the perspective of a people becoming brought us together . . . the perspective of a people becoming free and sovereignty responsible for itself."

Levesque brought Quebec's pro-independence forces together in 1968 by amalgamating the Mouvement Souverainte-Association he had founded a year earlier with the Ralliement National and soon afterward with the Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale.

He remained PQ leader through thick and thin, losing his own riding in the 1970 election that saw seven PQ members elected and remaining frozen out in 1973, when the party increased its share of the popular vote but won only six seats.

The party's great moment of triumph came on Nov. 15, 1976, when voters elected 71 PQ members, turning out Robert Bourassa's Liberals and bringing a pro-independence government to power.

"The party must be open, fraternal and contagious," Levesque said in speaking of the approach he favors in the referendum campaign.

"From the time the people say yes, we will go seek an agreement (with English Canada), and all the rest will follow. Let's get prepared, let's carry on, let's not give up."

Trudeau Likely To Quit: Dief

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Friday that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will resign if Monday's federal byelections indicate he has lost support.

Diefenbaker said there is an "avalanche of condemnation and dislike of the prime minister right across the country."

The majority of Canadians, even including some Liberal cabinet ministers, dislike Mr. Trudeau's "cavalier way of carrying responsibilities," the former Progressive Conservative prime minister said in an interview.

If the results of the 15 byelections proved what now was suspected, that Trudeau's popularity was extremely low, then "the pressure will mount and force him to resign."

Diefenbaker said Trudeau's throne speech was a complete washout that indicates the government plans no action to even begin correcting the eight to nine-per-cent inflation rate, the unemployment of more than one million Canadians and a government deficit of "14,000 millions."

"It is a spend-thrift government only pretending to reduce expenditures."

The biggest neglect by the government was that of the small businessman. Small-business bankruptcies in Camada were 10 per cent higher than in the United States.

Tories, Grits Unite To Beat Back NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals and Progressive Conservatives joined forces in the Commons Friday to defeat what they perceived as a too-socialist motion by the New Democratic Party.

The NDP motion, which was defeated 134-12, was the first foiled vote of no confidence in the government during the new session of Parliament and concluded the second day of debate on the throne speech.

The motion condemned the government for lack of economic planning and industrial strategy and called for tax reductions. It made support from any free-enterprise party impossible by calling for more government-owned enterprises.

Compared with the stinging personal attacks on Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Joe Clark Thursday, the day was quiet, enlivened only with more blows against Clark from a former colleague, Industry Minister Jack Horner.

"He is a boy wonder that flunked out of law school, who has never made a five-cent piece in business, and he thinks he can run the country," said Horner of Clark.

The minister was a Conservative MP for 17 years and ran against Clark and others for the party leadership. He crossed the floor to the Liberals in 1976.

When he was told that Clark did not flunk out of law school, he said: "If he didn't flunk out then he got out because he knew he couldn't pass."

Earlier Stanley Knowles, veteran MP and NDP leader in the Commons, raised the spectre of the great depression of the 1930s when supporting his party's motion.

He said he has heard the word "privatize" several times in the Commons in the last few days.

He was referring to statements by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and others about private industry taking over operations now run by government.

Knowles said it is not a new word—"it is as old as the poverty and suffering some of us saw" in the depression.

Government intervention had created unemployment insurance, family allowances and old age pensions. To block further government intervention would be "a backward step and those who take it will be criticized."

Loyd Crouse (PC—South Shore) said the Liberal had brought the country to the brink of economic ruin.

LIVING GRAFT HEALS KNEE

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto surgical team using a new technique has given a 26-year-old Montreal man a knee transplant by using one of the patient's own bones to produce a living graft with the donor's knee.

The 16-hour operation at Mount Sinai Hospital was performed on Roland Gabriel, who is walking on crutches at the hospital's rehabilitation unit.

Gabriel, a Haitian immigrant who lives in Montreal, developed a malignant tumor on a knee while studying sciences at the University of Ottawa. He had one operation in Montreal, but the tumor returned.

The new method was tried to shorten the time it would take for Gabriel to walk again.

"We took the patient's own bone with blood vessels intact and put it right beside the transplant, making a living graft," said Dr. Allan Gross, Mount Sinai's chief of surgery.

Gabriel was referred to Mount Sinai, which has the largest bone transplant program in Canada. Seventy knee transplants have been performed there since 1971.

Uncle Ben Quota Sticks

EDMONTON (CP) — Production agreements between the Alberta Liquor Control Board and the province's breweries prevent Uncle Ben's Breweries Ltd. of Red Deer from increasing its share of the draught beer market, Solicitor-General Roy Farran said Friday.

During the legislature's question period, Farran said the agreement was reached years ago when the provincial government forced breweries to divest their interests in hotels.

Under the agreement, beer-producing companies have their market for draught beer established in proportion to the amount of bottled beer each company sells.

Farran said although Uncle Ben's sold extra amounts of bottled beer during the strike that shut down Labatt's Breweries Ltd. and Carling-O'Keefe Breweries Ltd., they must now revert to the established quota system.

Small Business Gets $750M Jolt

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jack Horner announced Friday the government has set aside $750 million in new funds to help small industries threatened by the outcome of the world trade talks in Geneva.

The money will be used as loan insurance to help small and medium-sized manufacturers get debt financing to tide them over the difficult period ahead, as world trade patterns shift in the 1980s.

The trade talks, now reaching their final stage, are expected to result in the lowering of many of Canada's tariff barriers. This could jeopardize many industries which rely on that tariff protection to keep out cheap imports.

Horner also announced the setting up of a panel of experts, under his department's authority, to determine which industries are likely to be hurt most by the move toward freer world trade.

The panel, composed mainly of businessmen, will advise the government on ways to ease the blow.

The minister announced his new programs in the Commons during the second day of debate on the speech from the throne and later gave a detailed outline of his proposals at a news conference.

He said freer world trade will generate more opportunities than problems for Canada, but the government wants to ensure that the industries which are ill-equipped to adjust to increased foreign competition are helped over the transition period.

Horner said the initiatives are part of the shift of emphasis contained in the government's August spending cut program.

"We made the cuts to free up money to help the private sector. Our policy is placing first priority on industrial growth through private enterprise."

The additional $750 million will increase the amount in the government's loss insurance fund, under Horner's enterprise development program, to $1 billion.

The money is available to allow a small businessman to go to a bank or othe lending institution and apply for money on grounds the government is backing him.

If his enterprise fails, the government will pay up to 100 per cent of the lender's loss.

Horner said this means companies with innovative ideas, which might have had difficulty getting financing, now will have access to more loan money.

Besides the expansion in loan insurance, Horner gave a breakdown of the economic development program announced by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in August.

The government would spend $70 million to assist the shipbuilding industry, $140 million to help manufacturing and $65 million to support resource industries and tourism.

Asked by reporters to specify some of the individual programs to receive assistance, the minister said he has not yet cleared them with the cabinet. He expects to make a major announcement about one project within the next couple of weeks.

"But if I start announcing all kinds of them (projects) before I get them through cabinet, there will be a lot of expectations that might not be satisfied."

Horner said he also intends to discuss many of the projects with the provincial premiers at the first ministers' meeting later this month.

Johnson Defends CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC President Al Johnson has rejected criticism of the corporaton's middle management heard during public hearings of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

He said it was a myth that "grey, bloodless, inept middle managers" were frustrating efforts of producers and performers to screen better Canadian programs because they were afraid to take risks and were interested only in protecting their jobs.

Representatives of independent film makers, performers and former CBC employees were chief critics of corporation managers during the two-week hearing on CBC licences.

Johnson said it was easy "to take cheap shots" and added he found it distasteful.

"Criticize what we do . . . but don't just be name-calling," he said.

Responding to 138 briefs submitted to the commisson on the CBC and to questions from commissioners, Johnson reiterated that a budget cut of $71 million will seriously affect his plans.

There would be cuts in the administration and production and current programs.

He told commissioner Rosalie Gower that Parliament will have to provide extra money if the CBC is to introduce northern programs into its Northern Service.

Johnson said there was no way "adequate measures can be taken to assist natives in the North to preserve their identity and their culture by giving a little money here and a little money there."

Commissioner Mac Rogers questioned whether CBC had a correct list of priorities.

The corporation was planning a second network for both French-language and English-language in the early 1980s when there were complaints about the quality of service from the North, from isolated areas across the country and from viewers of the French-language service outside Quebec.

Ombudsman Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should scrap the new transport ombudsman appointed this week if it really means business in spending restraint, Don Mazankowski, Progressive Conservative transport critic said Friday.

The Alberta MP said the appointment of Sylvia Ostry, former public relations director for the National Arts Centre, is a waste of money and shows that Transport Minister Otto Lang and a transport regulatory agency are not doing their jobs.

Box Tells Meterman If the Dog Bites

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A local utility plans to begin testing portable lunchbox-sized computers that will enable meter readers to deliver bills on the spot.

Washington Water Power Co., (WWP), which will begin testing the eight-pound computer this fall, says it could save nearly $40,000 a month in postage if the project is successful.

The computer, said to be the first of its kind in the country, has been developed by I-Tron Inc.

Under the present system, meter readers each day pick up a stack of cards for meters they are to read that day.

With the computer, meter readers would pick up a stack of pre-addressed bills with a small cassette tape. Information on the tape would correspond with customers to be visited.

By activating the machine and inserting the tape, the computer displays the address of each successive customer for the meter reader. A push of a button tells on which side of the house or garage the meter is located.

Another button push gives the last meter reading and when it was taken.

The computer also can tell whether the previous meter reader encountered a dog at the address, and whether the animal prevented him from getting a reading.

When the new reading is taken, the operator records the new information into the computer, which is strapped over the shoulder in the same way as a camera bag. If the new reading is abnormally high or low, the computer asks the meter reader to check again.

After the input is final, the operator feeds a bill into the computer's high-speed printer, and the bill is delivered.

WWP says if the experiment is successful it could have more than 30 computers on all its routes by next summer.

Oil Called Too Cheap

CALGARY (CP) — Oil should be taxed for all the economy can stand now, a leading United States economist says.

Kenneth Boulding, a University of Colorado professor, said: "Nobody is going to conserve anything that is cheap."

"You cannot convince people there is an energy crisis when you flick a switch and electricity is there or you go to a service station pump and gas is there," Boulding said.

"The thing to do is tax the hell out of it now. All the preaching in the world isn't going to help."

There are only a few things that humans can predict about the future and one of them is that supplies of cheap oil and gas will not last forever, he said.

"Oil and gas could be gone in 50 years or maybe 100."

"Our whole society is based very much on this cheap oil and gas."

Boulding said the tremendous growth in human knowledge since 1860 had something to do with science but it also had something to do with oil and gas.

He said that while it is difficult to imagine our world without oil and gas and everything related to it, some drastic changes may take place in human life in the next 100 years.

UIC for Adoptions Urged

BURNABY (CP) — The general secretary of the British Columbia Government Employees Union says that employees who temporarily leave the work force to adopt children should receive unemployment insurance benefits.

John Fryer said in a news release Friday he has told Employment Minister Bud Cullen that while the Unemployment Insurance Act provides for the payment of benefits to women on maternity leave from their employment it denies those same benefits to an adoptive parent in the same situation.

Fryer said the 43,000-member BCGEU has negotiated maternity and adoptive leave clauses into its collective agreements and both types of leave are recognized by the provincial government as an employee right.

Every provincial government in Canada has recognized and grants non-paid adoptive and maternity leave to employees as part of their collective agreements, he said.

"The situation for workers outside the organized labor movement is even worse," Fryer said. "People without the protection of a collective agreement have no right to adoptive leave and when they look to the Unemployment Insurance Act for support while temporarily outside the work force during the adoptive period, they are turned away."

He said it is standard practice for adoption agencies in Canada to recommend or require that an adopting parent be at home for four to six months as an adjustment period for a newly-adopted child.

Company Quits Mine Talks

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Company officials for Placer Development's Gibralter copper mine near this Cariboo community have pulled out of a public debate set for Oct. 22 over its contract dispute with the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers union.

A spokesman for the union, which has been embroiled in a contract dispute at the mine for the past four months, said the company pulled out of the debate Friday.

The company ended a lockout at the mine this month but the union went on strike as soon as the lockout ended.

A central problem in the dispute is the question of who is eligible to vote on the new contract offer. Mine manager Jim Wright said the company won't make the offer known unless all employees have an opportunity to vote on it.

He said the union has restricted some workers from the vote.

Wright said if the matter is resolved, the company will go along with the debate.

About 90 of the 440 employees locked out May 26 have remained on the picket line. The lockout became a strike Oct. 4.

Rafuse Gets Life Term For Stabbing Woman

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Russel Raymond Rafuse was sentenced to life imprisonment Friday after being convicted in British Columbia Supreme Court of the stabbing death of a Burnaby woman.

Virginia Alice Sjoberg, 24, was found in her apartment Sept. 25, 1977 with 19 stab wounds, an equal number of slash wounds and a foot-long bread knife embedded in her right eye. She was a girl friend of Rafuse's older brother.

Rafuse smiled and joked with his defence lawyer Henry Sarava shortly after the all-male jury delivered its verdict following eight days of trial.

The jury declined to exercise its option to extend Rafuse's eligibility for parole to 25 years, meaning he could be released for parole in 10 years.

During the trial, Rafuse's lawyer maintained that the man was insane and that he was provoked into killing the woman while drunk, which, if accepted, would have meant a conviction of manslaughter.

After deliberating for four hours, the jury returned to ask Justice D. E. Andrews to clarify the difference between second-degree murder and manslaughter. Several minutes later they returned with the verdict.

The jury heard evidence that Rafuse had been drinking heavily on the night of the stabbing and that the woman had mocked him because he was unable to have sex with her.

Fishermen Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal combines branch officials whose presence disrupted a Labor Relations Board hearing Thursday, failed to show up Friday.

But the United Fishermen and Allied Workers, which walked out the hearing Thursday to protest the presence of combines investigator Simon Wapniarski and lawyer Arthur MacLennan, was back.

The board is considering a request from the Pacific Gillnetters Association for a cease-and-desist order against circulation of an alleged black list of non-union fishermen, who fished during last summer's five-day strike.

George Hewison, UFAWU secretary-treasurer, said although the union fears LRB testimony might be used by the combines branch.

7 B.C. Rail Unions Braced for Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unions representing 3,000 workers at B.C. Rail are preparing to strike next week, a spokesman for the seven-union joint council said Friday.

He said negotiations, carried out under mediator Fred Geddes, broke off after several weeks of meetings following a 2½-day wildcat strike in August.

The unions will serve strike notice Wednesday, leaving them free to strike Saturday noon providing the mediator has reported out. Workers earlier voted 76.2 per cent in favor of a strike.

"We have failed to reach agreement on practically all common and trade issues," the unions said. "The railroad has not bargained realistically."

BCR spokesman Hugh Armstrong said the railway's latest offer called for a 7.66-per-cent increase in wages and benefits over one year.

The provincially-owned railway, also proposed that Kenneth Strand, former president of Simon Fraser University, carry out a binding wage rate study. The unions want to clear up wage disparities resulting from the imposition of federal wage controls.

BEER AT DISCOUNT?

NDP consumer affairs critic Norm Levi called on the government Friday to sell a case of U.S.beer at half price to every customer who buys two cases of beer brewed in B.C.

The Vancouver-Burrard MLA said the discount would start the movement of B.C. beer and reduce the overstock of U.S. beer in liquor stores caused by heavy purchases during a summer brewery strike.

The government is not expected to accept the suggestion. On Thursday, the B.C. Liquor Distribution Branch (LDB) announced that Canadian beer supplies should be back to normal next week.

The LDB had been holding back on ordering Canadian beer until it could deplete its stocks of U.S. beer.

LDB general manager R. A. Wallace said liquor stores will be able to resume on Monday ordering as much Canadian beer as they can handle.

Wallace said it is likely all American beer will be sold before its quality begins to decline. If this is not the case, the beer will be dumped or exchanged, and the major breweries have agreed to share any losses incurred by the branch if dumping is necessary.

Coal Port Clamp Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public hearings on expansion of the Roberts Bank port in suburban Delta should be replaced by an inquiry into West Coast deep-sea ports, the Fraser River Coalition said Friday.

The coalition, consisting of 10 environmental and naturalist groups including the Canadian Scientific and Environmental Control Society (SPEC), released an 85-page brief Friday outlining reasons the port facility should not be expanded.

The existing facility currently handles almost 14 million tons of coal a year and has a capacity to handle 17 million tons.

A federal environmental assessment review panel will hold public hearings in Richmond and Delta from Oct. 24 to Nov. 2 on the proposed expansion.

The Fraser River Coalition said Friday that further expansion of the port would have a detrimental effect on habitat areas for fish, crabs and waterfow, would increase noise and air pollution, increase the possibility of a chemical spill and cause urban and industrial development of adjacent farmland.

The coalition said the planned public hearings are set up in such a manner that they will become nothing more than closed conferences and the schedule will restrict public participation. The coalition says the hearings are premature because it is not proven that massive port development is required on the B.C. coast at this time or that Roberts Bank is the best site for such port development.

Fingers Crossed On Spill

MILFORD HAVEN, Wales (AP) — A British tanker cruised alongside a damaged Greek tanker in the Irish Sea early today, pumping out its cargo of crude oil to keep it afloat and avert a major pollution crisis.

The trade department reported that the crippled 58,800-ton Christos Bitas, damaged when it ran onto a rocky reef off this major oil refinery port Thursday afternoon, was listing badly with its bows awash.

The Welsh Office said the Piraeus-registered vessel was "still in danger of sinking." However, a spokesman said there was no immediate danger of a major oil spill.

"We hope we can keep the tanker afloat until we can empty her," he said.

The British tanker, Esso York, was ordered to tranfer the Greek vessel's cargo of Iranian crude to lighten the ship. Another tanker, British Pteroleum's British Dragoon, was expected to join the lightening operation.

The coast guard estimated as much as 600,000 gallons of oil have already spilled from three of the Christos Bitas' tanks, punctured when it ran aground on Skomer Island off the picturesque Pembrokeshire coastline.

Latest reports from reconnaissance planes said an oil slick 16 kilometrres long and 10 kilometres wide was trailing behind the stricken tanker. But government officials said it did not appear to be threatening wildlife sanctuaries and other beauty spots on the Welsh coast.

The coast guard said weather conditions in the area were good and northeasterly winds building up were expected to blow the slick away from the coast. It said six tugs were spraying chemicals on the slick to break it up.

Trade department officials said a major investigation will be held to determine why the Christos Bitas ran aground.

Vance Hopeful On Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance says Egypt and Israel may be able to wrap up their historic peace treaty by Nov. 19, the first annviversary of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem.

"I think it can be done," Vance told The Associated Press late Friday as he ended a second day of negotiations on terms of the settlement.

Vance then flew to Pretoria to try to persuade South Africa to agree to a UN plan for independence and black rule in the territory of Namibia.

Informal discussions were continuing between members of the Egyptian and Israeli delegations but no formal meeting was set because it is the Jewish Sabbath.

An announcement issued at the state department said regular negotiating sessions were expected to resume Sunday.

Later Friday, the state department confirmed that the head of the Egyptian delegation, Kamal Hassan Ali, and acting Egyptian Foreign Minister Boutrous Ghali, were going to Cleveland today to confer with Saudi Arabian King Khaled, who is recuperating from heart surgery.

Vance's optimistic forecast represents a shortening of the 90-day period the Camp David summit agreement set aside for completion of the treaty. That would have meant completing the pact by Dec. 17.

The Nov. 19 anniversary date has been considered an outside target considering the details of Israeli withdrawal and security measures that must be worked out.

The focus of the negotiations is a treaty draft submitted by the United States, in its role as "full partner."

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

VICTORIA

A few years ago I saw a sign in front of an antique shop that announced for sale within, "Treasure and Trash". That illustrates the paradoxical nature of tradition in the Christian religion.

Faith is nourished from the springs of tradition. Without its traditions Christianity would soon evaporate into nothingness. But, on the other hand, tradition can inhibit the porgress of religion and put dampers on the life of faith. As Harry Emerson Fosdick once put it, "Like a river dammed by its own ice, religion is held back by its congealed formulations."

In the New Testament book, the Letter to the Hebrews, this issue is brought into focus in this way:

"With all these witnesses to faith around us like a cloud, we must throw off every encumbrance, every sin to which we cling, and run with resolution the race for which we are entered, our eyes fixed on Jesus, on whom faith depends from start to finish." (12:1,2 New English Bible)

Christian tradition is personified in the pioneers and heroes of faith. But we must not idolize our traditions, presume on them, treat them as museum pieces; we must use them to motivate and direct us to "run with resolution the race for which we are entered."

It is one of the necessary tasks of each Christian generation to appropriate the creative thrusts of its religious traditions—and at the same time to keep the conduits of tradition free of muck. They must bring critical judgment to bear on their traditions, discriminate between traditions which stifle and hobble and traditions which stimulate and energize—discriminate between "trash" and "treasure".

In John Osborne's play of 20 some years ago, Look Back in Anger, Jimmy Porter, the original "angry young man", says this of the gentry of England: "They're a romantic lot. They spend their time mostly looking forward to the past." I don't know how fair it is to say that of the English gentry, but I do feel that they can be applied with some justice to a substantial segment of the Church today.

The tragic aspect of all this is that when we look forward to the past we are in danger of making trash out of our great treasure in tradition. Many of us Christians today, instead of running resolutely and taking nourishment from our traditions in faith, simply toddle along in self-conscious conventionality. So often in the Church we are more concerned with what we have done—or like to think we have done—than with getting on with the job to which we are called.

Look at the great Christian leaders through the centuries: Paul and Peter and the other New Testament Christians, the many faithful persons, known and unknown, who took the Gospel through persecution under the Roman Empire and then carried it through the Dark Ages. Martin Luther and John Calvin and John Knox and John Wesley. St. Thomas Aquinas and St. Francis of Assisi and St. Francis Xavier. Dr. Albert Schweitzer and Martin Luther King and Pope John XXIII. And thousands of others who were driven by the great traditions of faith. They didn't mince delicately along in faith's race: they ran with resolution.

New youth service grows from overcrowding

Emmanuel Baptist Church at 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road has been experiencing a period of rapid growth over the past few months, particularly evident at the 9:30 a.m. family service Sundays.

To help alleviate the overcrowding, the church came up with the idea of holding a special youth service at another location, which is proving highly popular.

Rev. Norman Archer, Emmanuel's pastor, said this week that the church has been jammed to capacity at many services and it has been "standing room only" for some time.

"To cope with this problem, we have been trying to find alternatives, and additional accommodation has finally been obtained."

"We have been able to secure the use of the nearby Henderson Park Pavilion," he said.

A special service at 9:30 a.m. Sundays at the pavilion has been specifically designed to meet the needs of teenagers in the range of Grades 9 to 12.

"The service is planned and led by young people under the leadership of our youth pastor Edward MacKay.

"This ministry will prove an attraction to young people all over the city, and will be the source of beneficial impact on the community," he said.

Mormon Arnold Friberg, an artist who has painted illustrations for the Book of Mormon among other works, has been selected to paint portraits of Queen Elizabeth and her son, Prince Charles.

Friberg and his wife, Hedve, have left for England, where they will stay for several months while he works on the paintings.

"I admit I am getting excited, with a feeling of buoyance, yet with real purpose," the artist said just before he left. "I was chosen, I know, because I am an old-fashioned artist."

The life-sized portrait of Prince Charles, who will be shown standing beside his horse, will be presented by the Canadian government at next year's opening of the RCMP Museum in Yellowknife, Northwest Territories. The museum is being named after Prince Charles.

BAPTISTS EXPAND

People came from as far away as Oregon and Alabama recently to sit in on the birth of a church. After three years of service in which it experienced steady growth, Victoria Baptist Chapel was ready to take on its new responsibilities as Victoria Baptist Church. Looking over the program prior to the special organization service were, left to right: Bo Brantley, the church pastor; Allen Schmidt, pastor of Royal Heights Baptist Church, Delta; Dr. Dan Stringer, Portland-based director of the Northwest Baptist Convention, and Dr. J.R. White, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Montgomery, Alabama. Victoria Baptist Church holds services at Cedar Hill Community Centre.

Laywomen discover new insights

"Women cannot explore their mission in the Church without a better understanding of scripture, history of the Church, and theology".

This was one of the key findings of a survey conducted by the Canadian Catholic Conference of Bishops across Canada, two years ago, and along with a similar call from Vancouver Island. Catholic women for more adult education, at that time, an original and thought-provoking program has been developed here on the Island.

A small, dedicated, committee of Catholic women, most of whom worked on the orginal survey, has planned and carried out a series of workshops designed to educate and inform women, using as resource persons women such as Sister Augusta Raabe, a theologian, of Nanaimo, Sister Marie Zarowny, diocesan facilitator for education and social justice on Vacouver Island, and members of their own committee.

Making a progression from woman's role in scripture, to an exploration of the various stage of a woman's life, to a broadening of responsibility toward each other, the latest of these series of workshops is planned to be held at Nanaimo, Oct. 21, and will feature the noted theologian and author Dr. Bernard Cooke of Calgary and his wife, Pauline Turner, also a theologian and sessional lecturer at the University of Calgary.

This workshop, open to all denominations and to both men and women, is intended to be an ambitious and exciting call to a new understanding of Christian community. Dr. Cooke will trace the historical development of the separate roles of men and women in the Church leading up to the present, and looking forward to the future. Pauline Turner wll speak on the many aspects and challenges of restructuring of Christian community.

The seminar will be held at St. Peter's Church in Nanaimo, and will begin at 9:30 a.m., ending at 3:30 p.m. Preregistration forms have been mailed to all participants of previous seminars and are printed in the latest edition of the Catholic diocesan tabloid. Registration fee is $5.00 per person, $7.50 per couple.

Inter-Church women meet

The Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada is sponsoring a national gathering at Cedar Glen, Bolton, Ontario, Oct. 17 to 19 with the theme Women Tomorrow, Today.

The purpose of the consultation is to enable Christian women leaders from across Canada to share out potential and responsibilities as Christians in action wherever they may be.

They hope to fulfil this by increasing awareness of the position of women in Canadian church and society.

They will study issues of national and international concern regarding women and educating themselves about issues concerning women in today's society and church and explore their faith as they respond to those issues.

To achieve these objectives, the delegates will use small groups, workshops and other sharing procedures. Sister Timothy Prokes will be the facilitator, but most of the learning should come from participant involvement.

Issues under study include: creative ageing; women in politics; women and employment; women, marriage and family, women in ministry; women and addiction, women in minority groups.

Wilma Thomas of Victoria will lead the session on women and employment and Mrs. Dorothy Parry, as president of the Ecumenical Women's Outreach of Victoria will attend as a delegate. The consultation will end with a party, celebrating Canada's 60 years of involvement in the World Day of Prayer.

Traditional division supported

A brief calling for a broad definition of religious liberty and a clear statement of separation of church and state to be included in a Canadian constitution was presented to Prime Minister Trudeau and the constitutional hearings by Canadians United for Separation of Church and State.

Ian Bruce Kelsy, president of Canadians United, said a mere statement of freedom of conscience and religion was insufficient on a constitutional level because of the lack of definition.

Pssst! Wanna Buy a Chunk Of Some Movie Action. . .

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto firm is selling units of ownership in a feature-length motion picture to be produced later this year in Vancouver.

Tentatively called The Changeling and expected to star George C. Scott, the film has a proposed budget of $6.6 million.

The Ontario Securities Commission passed the prospectus of Chessman Park Productions Ltd. on Wednesday, the first time the commission has permitted a public offering of securities in a motion picture.

The company is offering between 264 and 272 ownership units at $25,000 apiece.

Sale of 264 units will cover the $6.6 million budget, but sale of additional units would allow more money, if needed, for hiring a top supporting actor, the prospectus said.

But the prospectus also warns that "units are designed for individuals in higher income tax brackets who are prepared to accept the risk inherent in financing of motion picture films."

Tories Keeping Low Profile

RICHMOND (CP) — British Columbia Progressive Conservatives are keeping a low profile at their convention in this Vancouver suburb — at least outside their hotel.

Notices distributed to delegates Friday warned them against going outside the convention area sporting party decorations, emblems or signs.

The convention is being held in the Burnaby-Richmond-Delta federal riding where a byelection will be held Monday, along with 15 others elsewhere in Canada.

The federal Elections Act prohibits distribution or use of party materials on polling day and two days prior to it, meaning today and Sunday.

"It is possible to be fined and even imprisoned for breaking (the act) though it is my opinion and the opinion of other memers of our team of legal counsel that only if a delegate were wearing a label for the purpose of influencing the voters of Burnaby-Richmond-Delta it is likely a charge would lead to a conviction or fine," says Douglas MacAdams, legal counsel for B.C. conservatives

"The second reason is that we do not want to cause (leader) Joe Clark or (byelection candidate) Tom Siddon or our party embarrassment by allowing our opponents to say that Progressive Conservatives are law-breakers by reason of the use outside the hotel of party flags, ribbons, labels or similar items.

As many as 500 conservatives were expected for the convention, which gets into high gear today with discussion of resolutions and speeches by federal leader Clark and provincial leader Vic Stephens.

Goodbye, ICBC

RICHMOND (CP) — A Progressive Conservative government would phase out ICBC and put the insurance business back in the hands of private enterprise, provincial leader Vic Stephens said Friday.

The only thing worse than a private monopoly was a public monopoly, he added.

The Conservative leader also said he would sell the B.C. Development Corporation.

Economic Desperation

wait till some time in November to bring in a budget or things are just going to get worse," Baker said.

He said it is doubtful the bankrate increase will stabilize the price of the dollar on world currency markets.

"The world sees the kind of economic trouble this country is in. This is the strongest indicator we've had so far of just how bad the situation really is," he said.

Harvey Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) called the increase dramatic, but predictable. He said the dollar has been under such intense pressure in recent weeks that the government had little choice but to increase the bankrate.

"As a short-term measure, it was probably inevitable, but what we really need from the government is concrete action to do something about the country's balance of payments deficit."

The deficit is expected to be $4 billion this year.

Gerald Bouey, Bank of Canada governor explained the increase in a press statement: "Since the last bank rate change on Sept. 11 interest rates in the United States have moved up substantially with further increases in commercial and central bank lending rates having been announced yesterday and today. The spread between Canadian and United States interest rates is now quite narrow."

He said the margin between the two countries had to be widened because of Canada's exchange rate difficulties and balance of payments deficit.

"The increase in the bank rate will provide room for the necessary adjustments in Canadian interest rates to occur," he said.

Bouey said the increase will not undermine the central bank's effort to stay within its monetary growth target this year.

The dollar closed on the international market at 84.52 cents U.S. Friday, unchanged from its level one day earlier.

Rumors of an increase in the bankrate had been circulating among currency traders and politicians all week. By increasing interest rates in Canada, the government hopes to attract foreign investment and strengthen the troubled dollar.

The latest bankrate increase is larger than any of the previous four. Since March the bank rate has been raised four times by one-half a percentage point to bring it up to 9.5 per cent from the previous 7.5 per cent. The latest increase—three-quarter of a percentage point—is not the largest in the central bank's history, but increases of more than half a percentage point are rare.

Tourist Industry Tax Break

Craigflower Motel manager Don Emery said the reduction will be welcome relief. He said changes in assessment rules added $3,000 to the motel's property taxes last year.

"We have 60 rooms here and they are rented out on a monthly basis for eight months of the year. Our property tax was a heavy burden in view of the fact we act as a motel only four months of the year."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president John Ansell said the announcement will help a large number of motels and resorts in the Victoria area.

"This is one of a series of provincial government announcements that will be of particular benefit to Victoria," he said.

The other two announcements, he said, are increased grants in lieu of taxes for provincial properties in Victoria and indications major ferry construction contracts will be awarded to Yarrows shipyard.

STAMPS DEPICT FLAGS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN is to issue a series of postage stamps showing 16 member countries' flags a year. UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim drew the names of the first 16 from five boxes representing regional groups Friday. They are: Bangladesh, El Salvador, France, Guinea, Hungary, Iran, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mali, Rwanda, South Yemen, Surinam, Turkey, Venezuela, Vietnam and Yugoslavia.

Dump Drugs Plan Poorly Organized

max low

How about winning a trip to Hawaii because you've done such a highly commendable thing as gone to your doctor for a checkup?

Too far fetched? Maybe it's not. In the future, who knows what will be next?

Now I hate to be negative about a concept which deserves a fully positive reaction. But when they tried to put that concept into practice there was a giant foulup. And here I sit at my desk on Friday the 13th and already everything has gone wrong. So you'll have to excuse me.

You see, I had intended to tell you about this campaign to rid B.C. homes of unwanted prescription drugs days ago. I'm afraid, however, it wasn't all that quick off the mark.

Fine idea, though.

Thought up by the B.C. College of Pharmacists and supported by the provincial ministry of health and the B.C. Medical Association, the plan is for people to take any of the unused drugs in their homes and drop them into special containers in participating drug stores (about 400 of the 500 pharmacies in the province are taking part). From there they will be taken to hospitals and destroyed in incinerators.

So far so good.

The main intention, of course, is to take as many drugs as possible out of reach of children and cut down on the number of cases of poisoning.

In 1976, the total number of deaths due to poisoning in B.C. was 345. Although a fair percentage of those involved adults and much of the drug-taking was intentional, many of those who died were children.

"Last year, we had 7,500 cases of poisoning reported to us," information pharmacist Gillian Willis of the Provincial Drug and Poison Information Centre in Vancouver told me a week ago. "But many cases are not reported, of course. We estimate this figure was well over 10,000 and one third of these involved children four years of age and under."

As well as encouraging people to throw away these drugs, the campaign is including a bottle of syrup of ipecac, a safe preparation which induces vomitting, at $1.49 a bottle.

"In the United States they have had an annual Poison Week for some years now but this is the first time it has been held in Canada," Gillian said. "The other provinces are interested in what we're doing and they are watching us."

Let's hope they aren't watching us too closely . . .

For the whole thing was kicked off grandly at a press conference Tuesday by Health Minister Bob McClelland, who urged residents to take their unwanted drugs to their nearest pharmacy and drop them off.

Trouble was, later that same day none of the pharmacists on the Island had received the display literature nor the signs to attract customers nor the containers which were to take the drugs!

Oh well, slight slipup somewhere.

Next day, still nothing.

By Thursday, many residents had heard about the campaign on the radio and were going to their nearest pharmacies as instructed only to find a few red-faced pharmacists and still no displays or containers.

A woman who rushed into one of the large chain drug stores armed with about six or seven old drug bottles was a little perturbed to find there was nowhere to put them. The pharmacist dumped them into a bag until the proper container arrived.

"They were supposed to be coming to us via our wholesaler," Joyce Anderson manager of Town and Country Shoppers Drug Mart told me late Thursday. "The Pharmacists Society delivered them last week to the wholesalers — but not until after they'd left for their weekly deliveries to the Island."

The next delivery would normally have been Thursday but, because of the holiday Monday, it was delayed until Friday.

"I'm afraid it's poorly organized, isn't it?" ventured Joyce. "It's all a bit disappointing."

Finally, by some time on Friday, the Island pharmacists received their long-awaited containers.

But the sharpness had been taken off the edge of a two-week campaign, almost half of which had gone before it got started!

And then there was that bit from the press conference about the all-expenses-paid trip to Mexico. As an incentive, anyone dropping off unused pills or buying a bottle of ipecac would be entitled to enter a draw that could win a trip to Mazatlan.

Now, perhaps there's something wrong with me but I feel it's rather revolting to suggest parents would need that kind of inducement to do something which might save the life of their child or themselves.

Save a Life and Win a Trip! Is that what we've come down to?

Suddenly, I feel as sick as I would if I'd taken some of those drugs no one wants . . .

Escaper Still Sought

Police today are continuing the search for an 18-year-old Regina youth who bolted from the sheriff's lockup facility in the Law Courts building Thursday.

Sheriff Bill Lee said Richard Monette kicked out an unbarred window, jumped through the opening and fled as about 10 other prisoners watched.

Monette and another 18-year-old youth, Bernard John Strating, of 2872 Glenwood, had just moments before appeared before Judge William Ostler on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

The charges stemmed from three breakins in View Royal Aug. 5 and 6 during which an estimated $7,000 worth of goods was stolen. Ostler had remanded the pair to Oct. 24.

Lee said Monette and Strating were being held in the cell block area awaiting transportation back to Wilkinson Road jail.

Victoria Benefits From Doubled Gov't Grants

The province is more than doubling grants in lieu of taxes it gives municipalities with Victoria being the single largest beneficiary of the new system.

Provincial municipalities will soon receive grants totalling $7.3 million, up from $3.1 million the year before.

The city of Victoria experiences the single largest increase with a grant exceeding $2 million compared with the $774,000 it received last year.

Mayor Mike Young said the grant is about $76,000 more than council had expected to receive from the government. The $76,000 will be surplus revenue, he said, barring no additional or unforeseen expenditures.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said under the new policy, the province and the B.C. Buildings Corp. will pay grants equivalent to full municipal and regional district levies on all qualifying properties which they own.

"They now use the same standard of assessment as that applied by the municipality in assessing other commercial and business property," he said.

"That's a 162 per cent increase," he said, noting that $2 million is 10 per cent of the total property taxes collected by the city.

It is also seven times the amount paid to the city in 1975 under the NDP government "which refused to pay its share and shows how badly the city of Victoria was treated," the Victoria MLA said.

"It is my earnest hope a large portion of this gain will be passed on to local taxpayers in the form of reduced property taxes," Bawlf added.

He said the $2 million represents $30 for every man, woman and child in the city, and will undoubtedly increase in years to come.

He says he is delighted equality for city taxpayers has been achieved. He says his number one campaign promise has finally been accomplished.

He admitted it took a little doing to get all cabinet members to support the new tax scheme, but said it was always his chief complaint with the provincial government.

Saanich will receive a grant increase to $469,000 from $196,000 in 1977.

Other area districts getting increases include Esquimalt ($5,900 from $3,200), Oak Bay ($8,500 from $2,900) and Sidney ($1,000 from $600).

Deadly Red Tide Hits Island Coast

The federal fisheries department Friday closed the entire east coast of Vancouver Island to shellfish harvesting because of a dangerous and possibly deadly strain of red tide.

Ken Jackson, a spokesman for the department's inspections branch, said that traces of the paralytic shellfish poison had been found in widespread areas.

Areas closed to harvesting of clams, mussels and oysters are the Juan de Fuca Strait, Strait of Georgia and Johnstone Strait from Hardwicke Island in the north to the Canada-United States border.

Jackson said the ban applies to commercial and recreational shellfishing but does not apply to crabs and shrimp which are completely safe.

The fisheries department is testing the areas and safe zones will be declared when found, he added.

On Wednesday, most of Puget Sound in Washington state was closed to shellfish harvesting by red tide.

Gonyaulax is taken in as food by the shellfish but does not affect them, he said, but if eaten by humans it can be harmful and possibly deadly.

Symptoms of the poison, noticed within 10 minutes of ingestion, are tingling of the lips, tongue and inside of the mouth. Later the tingling spreads to fingers and toes and then causes numbness in legs and arms.

He said a doctor should be called as soon as the symptoms are noticed.

Bawlf Charges Feds Stalling

Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf accused the federal government Friday of delaying the salmonid enhancement program and the preservation of the Nitinat Triangle in Pacific Rim National Park.

He said the salmonid enhancement program — expected to double salmon stocks during the next seven years at a cost of $150 million — and approved by the provincial government, has not yet gone to the federal cabinet for approval.

The minister said he told Ottawa a couple of months ago that a suitable time for signing the agreement would be Oct. 16, the day the B.C. government dedicates a part of the Adams River near Kamloops to the late conservationist Roderick Haig-Brown.

He said Ottawa agreed but now informs him that Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc will not attend the ceremonies because he is campaigning in one of the eastern byelections.

"When my staff poked around on that a little they came back to me with the incredible news that LeBlanc's staff doesn't even have the document ready."

Bawlf said the federal government wants to take a second look at a federal-provincial agreement which would provide millions of dollars to compensate the owners of timber and tree licences in the Nitinat Triangle.

"I find that totally unacceptable," Bawlf said. "Two years ago the federal government signed a piece of paper saying that when the nuts and bolts of the compensation program were put together, they would pick up 50 per cent of the cost.

"We have bargained throughout in entirely good faith. We have worked hard to tie up the loose ends, in fact we have done the toughest part of the work. And now to be told at this late hour that they want to take a second look at a legally-signed agreement, well I find this double talk absolutely shocking."

Enrolment Shows Drop

The loss is less than predicted but an even greater decline is expected in 1980 when an exceptionally large Grade 11 class graduates.

Over the next two years the main decreases will be felt in junior secondary schools.

There are 2,072 students in Grade 8 this year, down from 2,238, and next year's class is expected to be even smaller.

Enrolment is also down in Sooke and Saanich school districts. The decline in Sooke is 1.4 per cent and in Saanich it is 0.5 per cent.

E&N DECISION SEEN IMMINENT

A decision on whether to allow CP Rail to discontinue its Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway passenger service is expected within a month from the Canadian Transport Commission.

"We understand the commission is now sitting on the case," said John Cooper, chairman of the Vancouver Island Steering Committee.

"The next 30 days are going to be crucial as to which way it is going to go."

Cooper charged that CP Rail still seemed determined to do nothing to help the service pending the final decision of the commission.

New schedules promised Sept. 1 have yet to materialize, he said.

Cooper said the train carried 2,150 passengers in the first 10 days of this month, topping the figure for the comparative period in July.

Insidious Inflation

Inflation is an insidious monster when it comes to the University of Victoria's operating costs, according to a study by UVic bursar Robert McQueen.

A special report McQueen prepared on non-salary inflation rates in university costs shows why education is so expensive these days.

Examples of inflation in McQueen's report included an 282 per cent increase in the costs of fuel oil and a 90 per cent rise in electricity rates over the last four years.

Fuel oil prices went from 12 cents a gallon in 1974 to 46 cents a gallon in 1978. Electricity rates rose from $10.86 per to $20.62 per 1000 kilowatts in the same time period.

The report was prepared for the UVic board of governors.

—First class postage rates went from eight cents to 14 cents, a 85.5 per cent increase.

—The cost of 100 watt light bulbs rose from 20 cents to 37 cents each, an increase of 85.5 per cent.

—Data processing cards that cost $1.45 per 1000 four years ago cost $2.69 per 1000 today.

McQueens report also says that inflation has dramatically increased the costs of biological supplies.

Glycerin went from $18.81 a gallon to $73.04 a gallon in one year, a 288 per cent increase.

Also in one year, sodium chloride increased from 84 cents a pount to $1.74 a pound, a 107 per cent increase.

Rats could be purchased at $1.51 each two years ago, but now cost $3.10 — an increase of 105 per cent.

Increasing prices, coupled with the decline in value of the Canadian dollar, have resulted in reductions in purchasing power for library books.

In 1974, $1,000 Canadian would buy 72 books published in the United States, in 1978 the same amount of money buys 51 U.S. books; a dcrease of 29 per cent.

With $1,000 Canadian in 1974, the university could buy 120 books from the United Kingdom, in 1978 $1,000 buys 40 books; a decrease of 33 per cent.

Campaigns to cut university costs are dampened by rampant inflation. An energy conservation drive on campus has cut energy consumption by 10 per cent over the last three years, but Hydro rates rose 90 per cent over four years.

Inflation hurts everyone, but at UVic, where the provincial operating grant rose by only 6.9 per cent this year, it's really a tough problem.

New Program Will Liven Newcombe

A program to breathe new life into the provincial museum's Newcombe Auditorium has been launched by the Friends of the Museum.

The Friends are a non-profit organization formed to support the public institution.

The aim of the project is to transform the drab atmosphere of the auditorium and foyer into one that's more exciting with programs that are people-oriented.

The hope is that there will be lots more things to see as well as more museum sponsored activities throughout the year.

Tara Nanavati, an experienced museologist, has been appointed coordinator of the project — a tough assignment but she's confident of success.

"I'm starting from scratch," she said.

"It's a challenging job. That's what makes it interesting."

She hopes to make the Newcombe an interpretative device for the museum, something which hasn't yet been done by other museums.

"This is quite a new concept," she explained.

"The Newcombe won't be used as a commercial device but as an extension of the museum and its collections."

As an example, she hopes to use a large part of the auditorium's foyer for various exhibitions. The space at present is not being put to any use.

"I also hope to move away from the lecture format, and get more and more into theatre, making maximum use of the stage."

As a start, Nanavati, has already arranged for four interesting programs this month.

The first, entitled Behind Closed Doors, is to help people to get to know their museum. It will be held every Tuesday at 10.30 a.m., starting Oct. 17.

It involves a series of illustrated, informal meetings on the museum collection and its functions.

The Oct. 17 meeting will feature a talk by ethnology curator Peter Macnair on Indian silver carving.

On Oct. 24, education chief Shirley Cuthbertson will speak on how to make use of the museum while zoologist Marilyn Lambert will talk on owls on Oct. 31.

Other programs include an illustrated lecture on Oct. 24 at 8 p.m. on Indian use of plants in the Pacific Rim National Park area.

The two speakers are Margaret Norris and Leslie Fenn, students of botany and anthropology, who spent the summer finding out what plants Indians use for food and medicine.

Hilary Stewart, a well known B.C. artist and archaeologist, will present a talk on Indian culture on Oct. 25 at 8 p.m.

The last program of the month will be a silent film series by Charles Hofmann, internationally known film historian. The meetings will be held on Oct. 27-29 at 8 p.m.

The series will include a showing of Douglas Fairbanks in the Thief of Bagdad.

As in old days, Hofmann will play the piano as the films are screened.

Rockefeller dream home puts guests in paradise

Pineapple delight cost cool $30 million

PALUA, Hawaii — Mr. Rockefeller has himself another dream home: 196 rooms, a couple of restaurants, two bars, a swimming pool and one of the peachiest views in all Hawaii.

He flung open the doors this weekend.

Totalled up, the entire package comes to a neat $30 million figure. And that, even in the islands, amounts to a lot of coconuts.

Called Kapalua Bay Hotel on the island of Maui, Mr. Rockefeller's new dream home is spread across 18 acres near what formerly was called Fleming Beach.

KAPALUA marks his second venture in Hawaii, the first being famed Mauna Kea off to the Big Island, a resort he sold recently to Western International.

Rooms at Kapalua come with his and her baths, king-size beds (for oversize twins,) refrigerators, private lanais and ceiling fans for the guest who chooses to switch off the air conditioner and switch on dreams of far-off Singapore and the Raffles Hotel.

THE LOBBY is a three-tiered affair rising before interconnecting buildings whose rooms face the neighbor isles of Lanai and Molokai.

One would travel a far distance to discover a more inspiring view.

Even for Hawaii, Kapalua is something special. Designed by the same architect who did the Kahala Hilton on Oahu, the new resort-hotel features carpets and tiles from Britain and furnishings gathered here and there throughout the world.

LIKE OTHER Rockefeller-operated digs, the emphasis will be on service.

In the dining room a waterfall gushes over a marble spillway. And in the kitchen executive chef Walter Blum (formerly of Shepheard's in Cairo) does the honors.

In addition, guests may opt to take their meals on The Vernadah, a specialty restaurant conjuring memories of turn-of-the-century plantation days.

Daily rates at Kapalua, including breakfast and dinner, add up to $115 for a single and $125 for a double, this for standard accommodations. A superior room figures out to $125 single and $135 double. Or for deluxe digs price adds up to $295 single and $155 double. Other rates will take effect in December.

IT GOES without saying that living like a Rockefeller doesn't come cheap.

On the other hand, where else in Hawaii can one settle down in the midst of a 23,000-acre pineapple plantation surrounded by coconut palms, an 18-hole golf course and mountains that create a backdrop for it all?

THE HOTEL was developed along with the golf course, tennis courts and a spread of super deluxe condominiums by Kapalua Land Co., a subsidiary of island-born Colin C. Cameron's Maui Land & Pineapple Co. In turn, the Kapalua Land Co. turned over operation of the hotel to Laurance Rockefeller's Rockresorts Inc.

To hear both Cameron and Rockefeller tell it, Kapalau promises to be a successful marriage with a long-running honeymoon. It's a golfer's dream of the hereafter.

ON THE GO
With Jerry Hulse

ALREADY construction is under way on a second course to give players a total of 36 holes set among pineapple fields that look upon Kapalua, Namalu and Oneloa bays, all this on the tip of West Maui.

There's a golf package for two that comes to $628 for five days and four nights. Besides room, breakfast and dinner, it includes greens fees and use of a golf cart.

Kapalua being a setting for romantics, the hotel also features a five-day honeymooners' package — room, breakfasts and candlelight dinners with champagne — for $510.

IN ADDITION to the hotel, Rockresorts also operates Kapalua's posh, $2 million Bay Club, an open-air restaurant near the hotel.

Covering 700 acres, the entire Kapalua resort takes in a couple of other beaches (Oneloa and Honokakua), a garden shopping area and a spread of condominiums overlooking Oneloa Bay, Molokai and Lanai.

Three years ago Kapalua's 141 Bay Villas sold for $84,000 to $130,000 apiece. To show how prices escalate, resales are bringing $250,000 to $375,000.

ROUGHLY HALF of the villas are in a rental pool enabling ordinary mortals to move in for $65 to $145 a day, depending upon size and location of the villa.

There has been feverish bidding for Kapalua's other condominiums. Although still unfinished, its 186 Golf Villas sold out in a single afternoon. More than 200 prospective purchasers dropped their cards into a hat. Names were drawn. Lucky buyers paid an average $135,000 apiece.

IN STILL another drawing, hopeful buyers arrived last July from as far off as Australia, London, Brussels and Hong Kong. In all, 1,500 waited anxiously for 161 units known as The Ridge. Although still on the drawing board, the entire bundle was snapped up the same afternoon.

YET, OF ALL the complexes, the most prestigious is the 36-unit Ironwoods development at Kapalua. It, too, sold out in a single afternoon, with buyers paying a whopping $442,000 apiece for a dwelling.

Thos Rohr, president of Kapalua Land Co., foresees the sale of dozens of other condominium developments. Another hotel is in the master plan. Some day Kapalua's population will number 2,500, according to Rohr's calculation. Perhaps more.

STILL, THE planatation days at Kapalua won't be forgotten. Not totally, anyway. In keeping with the old way of life, the grocery that sold to locals for years will remain. So will other plantation buildings, including the storied and popular restaurant where tourists still gather, high on Pineapple Hill.

Meanwhile, down the coast at Alexander & Baldwin's slick 1,500-acre Wailea development, other condominiums are selling out long before their completion dates, too.

The second golf course has been completed and only last month the $26 million Wailea Beach Hotel, operated by Western International, had its grand opening.

IT JOINS the Inter-Continental, just down the beach.

The new 350-room hotel is graced by man-made waterfalls and a bridge-spanned lagoon. Guests crowd the Lost Horizon disco and snack at the Maui Onion, a poolside eatery, as well as what promises to be one of Maui's grandest restaurants — The Raffles.

Rates are $46-$56 single and $49-$59 double. Or there are a couple of specialty suites with wall-to-wall windows on the ocean for $350 a day.

ACTIVITIES at Wailea range fom sight-seeing by helicopter to golf, tennis and riding. The resort's 11 courts cost a tidy $1 million and feature a stadium that seats 1,500. After the final serve, guests retire to the Set Point to munch on Mauiburgers and sip ice-cold mai tais.

Alexander & Baldwin figures to sink $200 million into Wailea before hanging up the finished sign — this over a period of several years. It is an oasis of undulating hills and green turf at the foot of Haleakala, Maui's dormant volcano.

LIKE KAPALUA, Wailea's luxurious condominiums sell like pineapple popovers. Last spring all 148 units at the company's third development sold in a single day for an average price of $160,000 apiece.

Most convenient way from London

Night Ferry to Paris is true railway artifact

By NEIL MORGAN

LONDON — Every night except Christmas Eve and Christmas an electric sign flashes above platform 2 at London's Victoria Station: THE NIGHT FERRY. In the sooty scurry and sobriety of Victoria, the sign presents a startling symbol of civility. It promises excitement.

The crescent of a new moon slashes across the 'G' in NIGHT, and white stars are specked against the sign's electric blue. Below, against gold lights, red letters read PARIS.

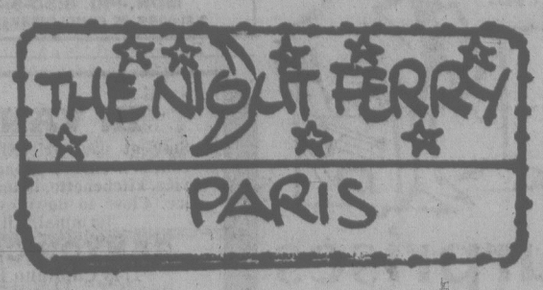
The Night Ferry thus proclaimed is not a ferry; it's a train, and its first-class passengers may sleep to Paris.

No lighted signs await those who board the Night Ferry at Gare du Nord in Paris for the opposite journey. The French have seen it all. Window signs simply read VICTORIA. Old blue sleepers sport faded gold stripes along their flanks below the lettering, WAGON LITS INTERNATIONALE. Their doors clank open and shut, echoing hollowly until their sound dies in the blackened arches of the station dome.

On the next track in Paris are the larger, newer sleeping cars of the Trans-Europ Express, rolling out for Germany. The contrast makes the Night Ferry seem just what it is: an artifact of the elegant, leisurely era in European travel.

The first Night Ferry moved out in October, 1936. It was Adolph Hitler's public dream to ride into London as a conquering hero aboard the Night Ferry.

The train survives because it is more than nostalgic. It is the most convenient way to travel between Paris and London. By first-class standards it remains a bargain.



The Night Ferry leaves London at 9 or 10 p.m., depending on season, and pulls into view of Montmartre after breakfast next morning. The opposite train leaves Paris at 10 p.m. and reaches Victoria station as Londoners emerge from their tube stations and throng toward their offices at the start of the day.

From the start, the Night Ferry has been a prideful collaboration of British Rail and French National Railroads. The French conductor greets you at Victoria with a "Bonsoir." But as the towns of southeast England flash past, the dining car waiter may find time, with his unmistakably British tones, to help you identify Clapham and Tonbridge, Ashford and Folkestone.

There are no stops between London and Dover, a leisurely journey of 1½ hours. It is time enough for a decent dinner, or for burrowing into the bunks of your compartment, as my wife and I prefer to do, with our own bottle of wine and our books.

Although the sleeping cars seem to totter a bit these days, their privacy and convenience make them particularly cozy nests for the night on the cross-Channel run. Others take care of the nuisances of travel as you sleep.

Before the train leaves Victoria you give the conductor your passports; he'll present them, on your behalf, to the French authorities at Dunkirk. You order your bottled water for the night and your coffee brought with your wake-up knock in the morning.

If you have drifted to sleep before Dover, you will strive to ignore little jolts as your sleeper is uncoupled and shunted into the cavernous interior of the ferry that will take you across the English Channel. You may dream, as I once did, of Dickensian dungeons. The sound effects are with you: The clanking of great chains, amplified in the hollowness of the ferry's hull.

There is room for 10 sleeping cars on the ferry. Tracks are fixed to the deck like sidings, and your car rolls aboard with a shove from the switch engine.

Then it is chained to the deck, and iron stanchions are locked beneath the car to guard against derailment in stormy seas.

The Channel crossing to Dunkirk requires 3½ hours, and only a boistrous sea is likely to stir the sleeping; the gentle pitching that is usual on the Night Ferry makes it, for me, the best part of the night for sleeping.

Then it's a run of just under four hours from Dunkirk to Paris. It is a scenic run under moonlit skies. But if you have slept well (and nervous sleepers may find a sedative worthwhile) it will be hard to avoid a sense of exuberance at stepping from your compartment into a fresh Parisian day.

Still, there are problems for Night Ferry passengers.

During the recent observance of the 50th anniversary of Wagon-Lits, the company that owns those sleepers, the compartments were dotted with self-congratulatory notices. I decided that the car I rode one night during that celebration was original equipment, and so was the leaking chamber pot.

On another trip last year, our car had no hot water. There had been a fuse problem that the conductor couldn't solve, and compartment lights flickered and died. So did the fan. I lowered the window for fresh air, and later it took the combined heavings of the conductor and myself to close it.

Yet we always return to the Night Ferry, warts and all.

My wife and I closed out a European trip by travelling to London last New Year's Eve on the Night Ferry. We brought our own champagne, and a sense of holiday camaraderie lured most of the passengers—there were fewer than a dozen in our car—out into the aisle before midnight.

An English university student, who wore a French beret over her long blonde hair, carried a volume of Racine tucked under her arm. A fine old South Carolingan with short-trimmed white hair introduced us to her husband, a retired British army general. They were on their way back to England from a month in the south of France, and hoped we would telephone their daughter when we reached California. As the New Year approached we all raised glasses to the Night Ferry, and sloshed only a little as the train leaned around a curve.

The winter sun had not yet appeared when, fresh from a deep sleep, we were greeted by a British Customs agent in an almost deserted Victoria station.

"A good New Year to you, sir," he said.

U.S.A. increases duty-free quota

WASHINGTON — President Carter has signed a bill that increase to $300 from $100 the amount of duty-free merchandise travellers may bring into the United States from foreign countries, including Canada, the White House said.

In a statement, Carter said the legislation will "make entering the country a quicker and more pleasant experience."

The new personal exemption, which takes effect in 30 days, applies to persons who are out of the country for at least 48 hours and may be claimed once every 30 days.

The legislation imposes a flat 10-per-cent duty rate on purchases worth more than the $300 exemption and less tha $900. For purchases worth more than $900, varied rates apply based on the type of merchandise, said Dorothy Ladue, a spokesman in the U.S. Customs Service.

Currently, the duty rates vary from five per cent for phonograph records to 22.5 per cent for cigarette lighters.

The bill raises to $25 from $10 the duty-free gifts that may be sent to the United States.

Singapore: City of surprises bustling with excitement

By EVELYN KIERAN

Singapore is a surprise to most first-time visitors.

It seems no matter how hard we try to be open-minded about places we have not visited, it's almost impossible not to be prejudiced by what we think we know of them.

Sidney Greenstreet, sweating profusely, in his white linen suit. Ceiling fans stirring the fetid, tropical air. Westerners dissipating their lives away over too many pink gins at the bar at Raffles. Sordid waterfront slums, the hangout for dozens of questionable characters. Too many late movies leave us with ideas not easy to forget.

AND SINGAPORE could hardly be more different. It's true, there are some ceiling fans in the bars at Raffles (which is now a historical landmark). But they are more for fun and show than actual air cooling.

And Singapore's waterfront is certainly colorful and full of action. But it's as clean as a Dutch canal.

The whole city is a blooming garden. Flowers everywhere. Wide avenues. Lots of trees. Millions of shops and open markets. Lots of hustle and bustle. People coming and going at all hours of the day and night. Lively, vital, growing.

SIR STAMFORD Raffles would hardly recognize it as the tideland-harbor where he came ashore in 1819. What he saw then convinced him Singapore (named for the lions which once prowled freely here) was destined to be the No. 1 commercial port in what was then known as the Straits Settlements.

HE SET about building a city around the enormous natural deep-water harbor. In the ensuing years, the British lined Elizabeth Walk, the harbor drive, with great grey stone, neo-classic buildings for government, commerce and sport. Most of those buildings are still standing, in use and labelled as historical landmarks, not to be destroyed or changed in any fashion.

But, beyond the immediate area, the harbor-front has grown. Handsome, multi-story, glass-facaded commercial buildings have replaced decaying two-story wooden warehouses. The harbor facilities have expanded to make Singapore the fourth largest shipping center in the world.

AFTER YEARS of British, then Japanese occupation, and a brief spell as part of Malaysia, the republic of Singapore was established in 1965.

Since then, it has been a case of all systems go, to make it the leading city of Southeast Asia.

The city still shows the hand of the British who built it, and made it a refuge for post-revolution Chinese and then opened its arms to Malays, Indians and all the capital the western world cared to invest. Now it is multi-cultural, multi-racial, strongly socialistic, heavily bureaucratic, unbelievably clean and unusually beautiful.

SINGAPORE offers the visitor an endlessly fascinating kaleidoscope of Asian life. It is a city-state which has solved or is well on the way to solving, most of the urban problems which still beset so much of the world.

OVER TOWARDS the Indian quarter you will find spices: Curries hot enough to stop your mother-in-law's tongue, or cooling coconuts—meat, oil or milk. Cardamom, cinnamon, cloves in neat packets make welcome souvenirs.

Textiles from cheap synthetics to hand-made silk and batiks can be cut and sewn into eastern or western fashion in a day.

THE CHATTER of commerce flows amid the singing of birds—hung out on the street in colorful cages and much treasured as family pets.

This is old Singapore, near the original harbor and its sampan-filled river. It's hot, noisy, colorful and spilling over with vigor and business and fun of living.

But Singapore is not so much a sightseeing city as it is a people-watching place.

IT IS A city of celebrations—more than 30 major ones are noted in the city calendar each year. And what celebrations! The visitor is quickly caught up in the color, the drama, the fun of the holiday whether it be Indian, Chinese or Malay.

Fireworks, bright flags, balloons, street fairs and games abound. Music, dancing and an open invitation to participate mark all festivities.

SINGAPORE is also a shopping city—probably the best in the Orient.

Copenhagen's package enticing

Visitors to Copenhagen during The Lively Months, October through April, have found the city's cultural and entertainment life to be at its best. This year it becomes easier and more reasonable for the traveller from North America to sample the many delights of Denmark's capital through a new program developed by the Copenhagen Tourist Association and the Danish Tourist Board.

Everyone who purchases a minimum package, consisting of air transportation and one night stay, is entitled to the Copenhagen a la Carte booklet, which contains coupons worth $80 per person in savings on sight-seeing, shopping, dining and entertainment in and around Copenhagen.

Included in the bonus booklet are approximately 35 coupons entitling visitors to discounts on the following: sight-seeing in Copenhagen and North Sealand; a dinner cruise; a hydrofoil ride between Copenhagen and Malmo, Sweden; admission to Hamlet's Castle at Elsingore; entrance to Copenhagen Zoo; lunch or dinner at 25 popular restaurants in the city; admission to nightclubs and admission to the Louis Tussaud's Wax Museum, Theatrical Museum and Court Theatre of 1766 and Danish Maritime Museums.

Other coupons in the book offer Copenhagen visitors free entry to the Carlsberg and Tuborg Breweries, including a complimentary glass of beer; first 100 kilometers free when renting an Avis or Hertz car; free rental for 24 hours with an Inter-Rent car (clients pay no rental fee, only mileage, gas, insurance); and complimentary coffee and Danish pastry at coffee shops in Illum's and Magasin du Nord's department stores.

Move into 20th century slow process

In Honduras the past is prologue

By LYNNE CARRIER

Rooftops of Honduran villages create a patchwork of earthen-colored petit point stitched in tile across mountains and valleys.

That first glimpse of Honduran villages brought back memories of past visits to this Central American country: A journey to Copan, Mayan ruins rivalling any to be found in this region; a trek through a rain forest drenched in orchids; the Honduran peasant who prepared a pungent herb tea to cure a headache.

STILL, ON a recent tour of the country, I found there was more to be discovered.

Tegucigalpa, the Indian word for "silver hill," was preparing for its 400th anniversary when we arrived. Along narrow streets, as hilly as a roller coaster, Hondurans were sprucing up the facades of low stucco buildings.

The dense little capital, crowded in the confines of surrounding hills and dominated by Mount Picacho, is dotted with churches, some of them centuries old.

THEY STILL stand because Tegucigalpa has never suffered a major fire, flood or earthquake, the Hondurans are fond of saying.

Though its cachet is distinctly Spanish colonial, the city is moving into the 20th century. Slowly.

Street vendors, a familiar sight in Latin America, have been chased across the Choluteca River to the peasant markets in neighboring Comayaguela. City officials, on an urban clean-up campaign, declared them to be litterbugs.

AND OUR hotel, the elegant Honduras Maya, was dispelling Tegucigalpa's image as a town that rolls up its sidewalks after dark.

Besides a nightclub with a lively dance band, the hotel has opened a casino. It's patronized by visiting Americans although there are Hondurans huddled around the blackjack table or playing the one-arm bandits. They were the wealthier residents. A Honduran must earn at least $10,000 a year to get in. Those with fewer assets take their chances on national lottery tickets.

ALONG A winding mountain road, we were bused to Valle de los Angeles, an old mining town about an hour's drive from the capital. A freshly white-washed village clustered around the gardens of its central plaza.

The cafe on its outskirts was closed that Monday morning, but the guide asked Don Salvatore, the manager, if he'd open it for a group of thirsty Americans.

In minutes, Don Salvatore had seated the visitors and had returned with snacks. First came tamales stuffed with rice, potatoes and pork. Then thick, buttered tortillas, frijoles, sausage and moist cheese.

THE GUIDE signaled it was time to leave. Don Salvatore looked crestfallen. We would miss his snack supreme, a roast suckling pig.

On to Zamorano, the Pan-American Agricultural School.

Every brick in its handsome buildings was handmolded by students. The model farm is totally self-sufficient. It produces milk, meat and honey. Wheat and corn sprout in the fields.

TO SOCCER—MAD Hondurans, though, Zamorano's most precious crop is an expanse of grass. Joseph Courand, the school's director, explained that this was no ordinary grass. It was the turf for the Central American "futbol" championship. Soon it would be shipped to Tegucigalpa and installed in the stadium.

Next to soccer, fishing is dear to the hearts of Hondurans. Bass abound in Lake Yojoa, and the country boasts excellent deep-sea fishing on its Caribbean and Pacific coasts.

AT A DINNER in the North Coast city, San Pedro Sula, the guests swapped fish stories.

One claimed that the biggest bass in the world was hooked in Honduras. But by the time it reached the United States to be weighed in for the title, it had lost a few ounces and had dropped to second place.

Not to be outdone, another chimed in.

"We have a village on the coast here where every so often it rains fish," he said. "When it happens, the people rush out to the beach and scoop them into their blankets."

LOOKING skeptical, a Tegucigalpan replied, "Well, that's a nice enough legend."

The Honduran from the coast was adamant. "No, it's true. They think it's some kind of water spout in the Caribbean that picks up fish and carries them inland."

I rushed to his defence. "In San Diego, we have little silver fish that come up on the beach and dance in the moonlight. Only after a full moon, of course. . . "

OUR GUIDES saved the best for last — a journey to the Mayan ruins at Copan in northwestern Honduras. The chartered DC-3 departed from San Pedro Sula carrying us over the coastal banana plantations and streches of tall, luminous Kikuyu grass. We crossed rugged sierras before landing in Copan Valley practically at the gates of the archaeological park.

Dubrovnik is polished medieval stage

By RUTH GRUBER

By day, under the deep blue Adriatic sky, the white marble pavement and the white stone of the graceful buildings along it echo with the tramp of tourists, the click of cameras, the delight of a dozen different tongues.

By night the rows of lamps along the centuries-old polished thoroughfare, called the Placa, make pools of yellow light on the smooth reflective surface. The street is deserted except for a few lingering lovers with hollow-sounding footsteps, the white stone fortress city looking like a medieval stage set under the dazzling moon.

Dubrovnik, on the south Adriatic coast, is Yugoslavia's premier tourist center. During high season it is simply overwhelmed with Americans, Canadians, Italians, West Germans, Frenchmen, Czechs, English — and even Yugoslavs — who crowd into a city whose old town has changed little in 500 years.

They come for the sun, the sea, the sights, and the history.

And they have been coming for centuries. The stream of travellers through the town — long a major stopping point in the east-west treks of diplomats, pilgrims, merchants and even crusaders — has been so steady through the ages that Dubrovnik's first full-fledged hotel, managed by a certain Nikola Beric, was built as early as 1421.

Before that there were large tavern-restaurants and a hospice for travellers way back in the 13th century.

Now there are numerous hotels of all shapes and sizes providing nearly 6,000 rooms as well as 8,000 rooms for rent in private homes.

For hundreds of years the walled fortress city was the pearl of the southern Adriatic, a powerful, independent city-republic which toed a narrow but fiercely independent line while fighting off the Turks from the east and the Venetians from the west.

Modern-day Yugoslavs — also fiercely independent people who for 30 years have been agilely balancing, as one Yugoslav put it, "east of west and west of east" — sometimes see their own ambitions in the light of Dubrovnik's past.

The city, whose construction was started 1,400 years ago on what was then a tiny island off the rocky coast, is girdled by high stone walls that run nearly two miles along the top of sea cliffs.

There is a walkway all along the circle of the walls and from up top the view on both sides is spectacular.

On one hand is the Adriatic — usually calm, mirrorlike, shimmering in a dozen shades of blue — stretching out to a horizon broken only by the lush silhouette of Lokrum island, a national park island situated a few hundred yards off shore.

On the other hand is the stone city — a labyrinth of narrow streets, stairways, squares and passages, all laid out long ago in dazzling white stone.

By all accounts this has been a bumper year for tourists on Yugoslavia's Adriatic coast. Some forecasters at the beginning of the summer predicted up to 15 per cent more visitors and up to 20 per cent more foreign exchange would come in over last year. Last year 5.6 million foreign tourists visited Yugoslavia bringing in $845 million in revenue.

Resort towns with all sorts of tourist facilities — including a fair sprinkling of nudist colonies and beaches — stretch from the Italian border in the north to the Albanian border in the south.

Dubrovnik, however, is the coast's single main attraction. Besides the sun and sea — and even the nudist beach on Lokrum — the city is a cultural center with a host of museums within the greater living city museum, and in the summer there is also a cultural festival featuring concerts and theater.

"You should have seen it in August," said one resident, shaking his head. "A couple times there were twice as many visitors as rooms available. They had people stationed at the edge of town telling people it was full, not to stop. They were actually turning tourists away at the city limits."

Americans winging it at bottom rate

Except that in the United States, it's unlimited mileage in the air instead of on a train, as offered by European railroads.

A year ago, Eastern Air Lines introduced an unlimited mileage fare which enables passengers to fly to as many as 101 U.S. cities served by Eastern and 11 other countries — mostly in the Caribbean — during three weeks time.

The fare? It has been between $302 and $323 depending on the season. It is scheduled to go up by about $70 a ticket soon.

"It has caught people's imagination," said Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock. "More than 145,000 passengers have taken advantage of the bargain basement prices."

Eastern's success is perhaps a major reason why Delta Airlines, which flies to many of the same locations as Eastern, recently introduced a similar unlimited mileage fare.

Ashlock said, "Businessmen are taking their wives along. Some are buying two tickets and using only one — because two unlimited mileage tickets in some cases are cheaper than one regular coach fare.

"Retired couples and young married couples who don't have a lot of money and are looking for an inexpensive travel experience snapped up the unlimited mileage tickets.

"So have many Europeans and Japanese looking for a cheap way to see America."

To take advantage of the low fares at least two persons are required to take a trip, the trip has to be worked out in advance, and the schedule has to be followed precisely.

"When we started we had no means to accurately gauge how we were going to come out price-wise," explained Russell Ray, Eastern senior vice president in charge of marketing.

"Now that we know the economics of the fare, we have made the necessary adjustments. The fare will be raised on Nov. 1, to a fare ranging between $372 and $399."

The average number of cities visited per passenger the first year of the scheme was 10. That meant the average segment cost only $30 to $32. The new fare brings the average segment to $37 to $39.

For most people, squeezing 10 different cities into three weeks of travel was more than enough moving around.

A few people with the help of a computer came up with some amazing journeys.

Tom Daren, 37, a Tampa, Fla., disc jockey, and a photographer friend, Jack Harron, 33, of St. Petersburg, Fla., for example, attempted to see how many different cities they could visit during the three-week period.

The two men spent a total of 121 hours 9 minutes and 15 seconds in the air. They made a total of 218 takeoffs and landings but the actually left the airplanes and spent time in 76 different cities.

They ate 48 meals in the air and crossed 28 different time zones — all for $323 each.

Beauty aids in Hong Kong

According to the Chinese Almanac, there are good and bad days for having one's hair done. Perhaps Hong Kong residents who have their hair groomed at street-side beauty parlors take this into consideration.

They surely notice the hairdresser's immaculate coiffures, which promise a satisfactory result.

Ustinov Has a Way With Children

By A. TANTUVANICH

NA WAH, Thailand (AP) — The youngsters of the village rarely visited by foreigners stared at the enormous figure with grey hair and a shaggy beard. The visitor stared back at the faces discolored by malnutrition. Suddenly, the man let out a bark and the whole village roared with laughter.

Peter Ustinov sighed with relief. His trick had worked again. After that he said hello to all the dogs in the village, and everywhere he went the children laughed and the pigs gazed at him as he mimicked them.

"When you can't communicate with language you immediately invent something else," he said.

Ustinov—actor, producer, novelist, playwright, recording artist and raconteur, among other things—visited remote villages of northeastern Thailand to appear in scenes with children for a film he is making for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF). It is described as a pictorial essay on the state of mind of children in such different parts of the world as India, Jordan, Guatemala and New York.

USTINOV
. . . special ambassador

As one of UNICEF's goodwill ambassadors, the British-born Ustinov has travelled widely for the last nine years raising money for the agency and advocating international action to solve the problems of children in the developing world. Those problems—hunger, illness, lack of education, general neglect—are to be the focus in 1979 of the UN International Year of the Child.

One can become exhausted just listening to the 57-year-old actor's tireless wit and endless anecdotes. Almost instantly he can absorb accent idiosyncracies and styles and mimic them in his stories.

And Ustinov—with Russian, German, French and Italian blood in his veins—said he feels at home everywhere.

"I don't think it is necessary to have roots in any country," he said. "It's an old-fashioned idea to think that such roots are attached to the soil. On the contrary, roots should be attached to philosophy."

Ustinov said he believes his career and public service are indivisible, although finding time for both can be a problem. His latest movie, Death on the Nile, was filmed in Egypt where he was also working on a UNICEF project.

Already behind him are two Academy Awards—best supporting actor in Spartacus and Topkapi—four books, 17 plays, eight films and a host of other credits and awards in opera, television, radio and recording.

Ustinov said he is often asked why he spends so much time in volunteer service.

"I just feel that if you're lucky enough to get on in this world, then your pleasure increases, but it must be allowed to increase in ratio with your responsibility," he said.

STUDENT PROTEST PINCHES NERVE

HONG KONG (UPI) — A peaceful protest movement by several hundred Catholic schoolgirls and a group of teachers criticizing education policies seems to have struck a raw nerve in the government.

After a series of sit-ins, petitions and protest marches, Acting Education Director Colvyn Haye recently declared he will not "let this sorry and dangerous state of affairs continue" and ordered the Precious Blood Golden Jubilee School closed.

The closure was aimed at preventing the student movement from spreading to other schools, and was applauded by some quarters as a move to "maintain discipline" among the young. About half of Hong Kong's 4.5 million population is below the age of 25 and a large number of them are in school.

The campus unrest that almost snowballed into the British Colony's major educational crisis was partly triggered by a minor scuffle between four pupils and several nonteaching staff members of the school. The four students were suspended for the rest of the term for the incident.

But the dispute at the Precious Blood has been simmering for a year since students unraveled mismanagement of school funds that led to the conviction of a former school principal.

This time, the dissenting students and teachers charged that the Education Department had from the start sided with the school authority and refused to listen to their grievances. They claimed to have been victimized by the school for their earlier exposure of the scandal.

They won considerable support from members of the public who have been critical of what they call an "anachronistic" education policy that turns out "subservient and unthinking students."

Some 200 schoolgirls, and later the 16 teachers, have kept a well-disciplined vigil outside the Catholic bishop's residence since the school's closure. University students have rallied to their support, along with several religious and teachers groups.

But the government stood firm. After an almost daily petition from the students, Gov. Murray MacLehose finally appointed an inquiry panel to look into the matter "to prevent recurrence of similar incidents."

Explosion Kills Six

ISTANBUL (AP) — An explosion in a store selling bottled gas killed six persons and injured more than two dozen in Rize, on the eastern Black Sea coast.

Lightning Hit Maria — And She Lived

By BILL MORRIS

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The urgent scream — Run! — was the last sound to reach Maria Brown before the lightning bolt crackled through her body.

It flattened her on the beach, stopped her breathing and her heartbeat and plunged her into a coma.

Now, more than six weeks after that moment of terror at Atlantic Beach, the 25-year-old book-keeper from Greensboro has recovered so rapidly — and inexplicably — that the doctors who treated her say she may be a marvel in the medical world.

"I think everybody is surprised that, with a direct strike, she could survive," said Dr. Richard Bloomfield, the physician who was called to the emergency room at Carteret General Hospital in Morehead City shortly after the accident.

Her recovery is something Bloomfield and two other doctors who treated her — a heart specialist and an ear, nose and throat specialst — do not understand.

Maria wears a ring of raw flesh around her neck where the lightning struck her necklace and fried her skin. It also scorched a spot on the right side of her skull and left long, jagged burns where the electricity travelled down her stomach and leg and out between the toes of her right foot. In addition to this visible damage, ther were partial losses of hearing and memory.

Because her heart muscle was burned by the electricity, she has been ordered to take it easy until the muscle mends itself, a process that may take another month or longer.

But for someone who was near death and now appers likely to become the stuff of medical history, Maria Brown is remarkably chipper and down to earth when talking about her ordeal.

"I felt like a train had run over me. But other than that, I didn't feel too bad," she said.

After the ighting struck, her heart stopped beating for about five minutes — roughly the maximum before the brain begins to suffer permanent damage — and she was in a coma for several hours.

With the help of her sister Sally, who was with her at the time, Maria is able to reconstruct the events of Aug. 26.

With a violent storm brewing, Maria and Sally and a male companion went to the beach to retrieve a raft and a backpack. Suddenly the girls' companion screamed — Run! — and the lightning struck.

Though the bolt struck Maria, all three of them and another man standing nearby were knocked unconscious. Their companion regained consciousness first, though his legs were temporarily paralyzed. He shook Sally, and she recalled running to a nearby arcade for help.

Sammy Piner, an off-duty Atlantic Beach policeman and member of the rescue squad, was three blocks away when the radio call came.

"When we arrived she had the dark look and her necklace was burned. I'd never seen anyone struck by lightning before, and I had my doubts we could revive her," he said.

Piner administered mouth-to-mouth rescuscitation and another man helped in the effort to revive the young woman. By the time the ambulance arrived, Maria was breathing and her heart was beating.

COMET SPOTTED

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Tokyo observatory said Thursday that an amateur astronomer has discovered a comet between the Lion and Stern constellations. It said the comet was discovered by Shigehisa Fujikawa, 34, and had been confirmed by the Smithsonian observatory in the U.S. The observatory has named the comet Fujikawa Comet-978.

Canucks Dealing In Eights

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks take their National Hockey League rookie show on the road today after their second straight eight-goal outburst in the suddenly friendly Vancouver Pacific Coliseum.

Thomas Gradin, a first-year player from Sweden, scored two goals for the second consecutive game Friday night, as the Canucks, with veterans Don Lever and Ron Sedlbauer also scoring twice, defeated St. Louis Blues 8-4.

The crowd of 13,204 gave the Canucks—and particularly Gradin—a standing ovation at the end of the game. Vancouver had opened the season Wednesday by busting Colorado Rockies 8-2.

Now it's on to Chicago and a Sunday meeting with the Black Hawks, the team the Canucks hope to dethrone as Smythe Division champions.

"It's good to see the veterans finally catching up with the rookies," coach Harry Neale, himself an NHL rookie, said after the game. "You expect to see the rookies shine in exhibition games, but it's the veterans who must provide the leadership once the season begins."

The Canucks had four rookies on the ice against St. Louis and all played well, including Curt Fraser, who scored his second goal of the season. Veteran Chris Oddleifson completed the Vancouver scoring.

"Let's not kid ourselves, we're not going to get that many goals all the time," said Neale. "We've got to work on our defensive play.

St. Louis, which came from behind to defeat the Red Wings 5-4 Wednesday in Detroit, almost came back against the Canucks. The Blues trailed 4-1 at one stage of the second period, but twice pulled to within one goal of Vancouver in the last period.

Goaltender Phil Myre of the Blues stopped 28 shots, including two breakaway saves on Pit Martin of the Canucks.

It was a rough game, with St. Louis receiving 31 minutes in penalties and the Canucks 23. There were three separate fights as both teams tried to establish a physical superiority.

Washington Capitals had to settle for a tie with Atlanta Flames, but Robert Sirois, who scored two goals in 13 seconds, seemed pretty satisfied.

"It's good going home undefeated," Sirois said after Friday's 3-3 tie in the Flames' regular-season opener. "We've got a pretty good team."

The Capitals won 4-2 Wednesday night in Los Angeles against the Kings, while the Flames started their season with a 4-4 tie with the Black Hawks at Chicago.

Meanwhile, the World Hockey Association opened its 1978-79 season on two fronts. Winnipeg Jets edged Birmingham Bulls 5-4, while Edmonton Oilers shaded Cincinnati Stingers 3-2.

Argos Risk Ealey

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts took a calculated risk Friday by releasing quarterback Chuck Ealey, who suffered rib damage and a partially collapsed lung in the club's 22-16 loss last Saturday to Calgary Stampeders.

Ealey, 28, was placed on waivers and the Argos are hoping his injuries will discourage another Canadian Football League from claiming him.

Argos general manager Dick Shatto said the move was made in order to take Rookie Doug Redl, a back-up Canadian offensive lineman, off the injury list for tonight's game with Hamilton Tiger-Cats at Exhibition Stadium. Under CFL roster rules, to activate Redl, the Argos had to cut a player who had played two consecutive games and Ealey was the one chosen by interim head coach Bud Riley.

Toronto will go into tonight's game with rookies Alvin White and Rodney Allison, at quarterback. Between them, they have about three games of CFL experience.

A game between Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers Sunday afternoon promises to be the feature encounter in the heavy schedule of games on the weekend.

The battle between the Western Football Conference-leading Eskimos, who have a 9-2-2 record to date, and the runner-up Bombers, who are four points off the pace with an 8-4 record, could be a preliminary to the WFC championship final later this season.

For the Eskimos, with 20 points to date, a win would put the seal on first place in the West. A victory for the homestanding Bombers would keep Winnipeg's hopes alive for a first-place finish.

In other games Sunday, Montreal Alouettes move into Ottawa to meet the Rough Riders while Saskatchewan Roughriders play the Stampeders in Calgary.

Some last minute decision-making by CTV has scheduled a television broadcast of the Winnipeg-Edmonton game on the Western network at 10:30 a.m. PDT.

Ball Hit to Nettles Guidry's Out Pitch

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Guidry got the win and Graig Nettles picked up the save, rescuing New York Yankees in the crucial third game of baseball's 75th World Series.

The Yankees came home Friday night and enjoyed it immensely, beating Los Angeles 5-1 to halve the Dodgers' lead in the best-of-seven Series to 2-1.

Today, in a rematch of the opening-game pitchers, right-hander Ed Figueroa was to try and erase his "choke" label when he opposed left-handed sinkerball specialist Tommy John, who had the Yankees hitting the ball into the ground last Tuesday night.

Guidry, a 25-game winner in the regular season, pitched out of jams all night Friday, and his best "out" pitch was the hard grounder to Nettles, the magical third baseman.

"Guidry didn't beat us; Nettles did," said Dodgers second baseman Dave Lopes, who was robbed on one of Nettles's gems in the sixth inning with two out and the bases loaded.

"He probably saved four or five runs for the Yanks," said Dodgers slugger Steve Garvey, who also was victimized by Nettles' gold glove with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth. "He was the key."

Roy White homered in the opening inning for the Yankees' first run. Nettles singled and scored in the second for all the runs Guidry needed.

"If you save your club a couple of runs, it's as good as an RBI or two," said Nettles, who has been struggling at the plate in the Series. "I think I can play third base as well as anybody."

The Dodgers appeared in awe of Nettles's fielding plays while the Yankees, seeing his greatness all season, considered it just another day at the office for the classy third baseman.

"What he did tonight is not out of the ordinary,' said Reggie Jackson, the Yankees slugger whose line single knocked in the middle run of a three-run seventh inning off Dodgers starter Don Sutton. "It was just on national TV."

It was the seventh successive Series game in which Jackson has delivered a run—one short of Lou Gehrig's record set a half century ago.

"His (Nettles's) nickname is Puff, but he blew the Dodgers out," quipped Jackson. "(Brooks) Robinson, how could he have played any better?"

Paul Blair, the slick Yankees outfielder, played in Baltimore for several years with Brooks Robinson, the best-fielding third baseman in modern times.

"Both of them were so consistent," said Blair. "Whether they were hitting .330 or .130, they made all the plays in the field. Puff is the closest thing I've seen to Brooks. The man can play.

"The thing Brooks could do better was come in and throw. Puff might have more range going to his left and a little better arm."

Guidry has the best pitching arm in baseball, but he was not overwhelming against the Dodgers. In fact, he was underwhelming.

"I had my fastball in the bullpen but lost it on the way to the mound," the left-hander said. "I realized about the second or third inning that the ball wasn't popping, so I had to resort to something else. I took something off the ball, threw a lot of change-ups and pitched to spots.

"When my fastball is working, I don't have to throw change-ups."

Dodgers slugger Reggie Smith fanned to end the game. It was only the fourth strikeout of the game for Guidry, who surrendered a season-high seven walks and eight hits.

"I had anticipated more heat from Guidry," said Smith. "He struck me out on a change-up, a slow change-up. That isn't fair."

Yankee catcher Thurman Munson, who singled in one run and then scored in the seventh, helped nurse Guidry through his struggles.

"You know the song, 'I did it my way.' That's the way Guidry pitched tonight. Slow stuff and more slow stuff. His slider wasn't any good and he didn't pop my glove. It had to be my way."

The Dodgers closed to within one run at 2-1 in the third on Bill Russell's RBI single. But they never scored again, stranding 11 baserunners—three on third base.

"Guidry pitched just well enough with men on base," said Garvey. "And we kept on making a mistake—we kept hitting the ball to Nettles."

Press Feels Reggie Blast

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, upbraiding the press in fiery tones, said Friday night that New York Yankees had been more than generous in allotting World Series shares but had made no decision on the amount to be given Billy Martin and his mid-season successor as manager, Bob Lemon.

There had been reports that the Yankees had voted half-shares to both Martin and Lemon.

"It's nobody's blankety-blank business what we do in our meeting," said the controversial outfielder—who also is the Yankees player representative.

"You blankety-blank blanks don't get in the field, don't go to bat and don't throw the ball. You have no right to get involved—it is our personal affair."

"Let me tell you: we have given more than a generous share to everyone—the two trainers, batboys, ground crew, guards, and even kids who run errands," he said. "The batboys were voted more money than I made in my first year in baseball."

Expressing his personal opinion of the shares controversy, Jackson said: "Martin served half a season and Lemon served half a season and it seems reasonable to me that they should split the manager's share—but it is not in our province. It is a matter to be decided by the commissioner."

Jackson said the managers' share fell under the provisions of Rule 45 in the players' agreement.

"I don't know what the rule says exactly, but I do know that this is something for the commissioner to act on and I don't intend to say anything about the commissioner. He might reprimand me the way he did in 1974."

Jackson was given a slap on the wrist while playing with Oakland A's in the 1974 World Series after he challenged a sports writer for statements made in a national sports magazine.

Rule 45, Section B, Paragraph 3 specifies: "Players, managers and coaches not with their respective teams on June 1 shall be entitled to such share as the commissioner shall determine."

Yugoslavia Takes World Hoop Crown

MANILA (CP) — Yugoslavia beat defending champion Soviet Union 82-81 after extra time Saturday to win the eighth world men's amateur basketball title, while Canada dropped a 96-94 decision to the United States.

The Yugoslavs and Soviets were tied 41-41 at the half and 73-73 at the end of regulation time.

In another game, Marcel de Souza sank a desperate last-second basket to give Brazil an 86-85 win over Italy and the bronze medal. The Brazilians, who led 50-45 at the half, finished the 14-country tournament with an overall record of eight wins and two defeats.

The Italians finished fourth, followed by the U.S., Canada, Australia, the Philippines, Czechoslovakia, Puerto Rico, China, the Dominican Republic, South Korea and Senegal.

Australia took seventh place with a 92-74 triumph over the Philippines in another game Saturday.

Canada lost its chance for the victory when Leo Rautins of Toronto slipped at midcourt with two seconds remaining. The ball rolled to Hoffman, who scored.

Rautins, 18, a University of Minnesota freshman, scored 16 points and wound up as Canada's leading scorer in the tournament with 191 points.

"We're a young team and we had plenty of chances to score tonight," said coach Jack Donohue. "Our play was erratic we made mistakes because of our inexperience. I just hope nobody blames Leo for the loss. He is a great basketball player."

Canada was ahead 50-47 at halftime, but fell 10 behind early in the second half before staging a late rally. Guards Ryan and Martin Riley of Winnipeg were Canada's high scorers Saturday with 20 points each. Eugene Kiffin of the U.S. had 25 and Hoffman had 20.

The Canadians finished with a 2-6 record in the semi-final round. Jamie Russell of Hamilton and Jay Triano both scored eight points for Canada, while Ross Quackenbush of Toronto and Steve Aitken of Oakville, Ont., had six each. Howard Kelsey of Vancouver and Tom Bishop of Calgary scored four apiece and Jim Zoet of Port Perry, Ont., had two.

Bill Oates, coach of the U.S. team, said the Americans were lucky to defeat Canada.

"The Canadian style of play is so similar to our own. They played very well and very hard. We are very happy to have got out of the game with a win."

It was the highest placing Canada has achieved at a world championship, although the Canadians placed fourth in the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

First Shutout for Bighorns

By The Canadian Press

Goaltender Andy Moog of Billings Bighorns recorded the first shutout in the team's two-year history Friday as Billings defeated Calgary Wranglers 8-0 in one of three Western Hockey League games.

In other games, the hometown Saskatoon Blades battled to a 6-6 draw with Seattle Breakers and Regina Pats lost 9-5 to the visiting Brandon Wheat Kings in a penalty-filled encounter.

In Regina, Brian Propp led the Wheat Kings with four goals. Kelly McCrimmon added two and singles came from Ray Allison, Laurie Boschman and Tim Lockridge.

Lockridge's goal went into an empty net at 7:21 of the third period. Regina goalie Jeff Lastiwka had been pulled after an argument which resulted in Gregg Pilling, Regina general manager and coach, being ejected from the game for disputing a referee's call.

After a scoreless first period, Saskatoon went ahead a 4-3 in the second. Seattle bounced back in the third and took the lead on two goals by Thomas. Brent Ashton's second goal of the night at 13:17 produced the tie for Saskatoon.

Reform Bill Passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives passed legislation Friday night to reorganize the U.S. Olympic Committee and reform amateur athletics in the United States.

But the bill was passed only after representatives deleted the $30 million from the Senate-passed measure which the bill's supporters said was necessary for it to be successful.

By a vote of 54 to 42, the House passed an amendment by Representative Harold Volkmer (Dem. Mo.), who had argued that the federal government "should not go into funding private corporations." He also said he was opposed to the federal government interfering in amateur athletics.

After the House approved the amendment, it passed the bill by a voice vote.

RON BOWKER FACES NEW CHALLENGE

Don't Mix a Jog With Walk or Run

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Jogging? The mere mention of the word turns off Ron Bowker, UVic's new middle distance and cross-country coach.

They way he sees it, if you aren't walking you're running — even if it takes you 20 minutes to cover two miles.

Okay, running it is. What does Bowker plan to do about it in his new role as co-ordinator of middle-distance events for western Canada?

"This is a full-time job," he explained. "It originated when the Canadian Track and Field Association decided to place more full-time coaches across the country."

The CTFA has co-ordinators across Canada in jumping, throwing, sprints and distance running. Head co-ordinator in distance events is Paul Poce of Toronto, who has coached marathoner Jerome Drayton and 1972 Olympic silver medallist Abigail Hoffman. Sprint co-ordinators are Ken Porter of Edmonton and Peter Manning of Guelph while Glen Digeorgio of Nanaimo, Phil Olson's coach in javelin, is the western throwing events co-ordinator.

Under a cost-sharing plan borrowed from the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, the CTFA pays one-third of Bowker's salary and expenses, UVic one-third and the B.C. Track and Field Association one-third.

RON BOWKER
. . . running's his game

In addition to coaching UVic in cross-country and distances (800 metres and up), Bowker's job will be to promote running in the community.

"We would hopefully develop a prototype distance program here," he said. "I think we'd be looking two years down the road. I can see myself working directly with about 60 people and indirectly with thousands as a resource person promoting running."

The 60 or so working directly with Bowker would mainly be UVic students, although there would also be some graduates and some non-students.

"We burn away too many kids when they're young," he said. "Experience should tell us that a person achieves his or her full potential in the mid-20s. Yet we start them in highly competitive levels at age 10."

Bowker believes there should be more emphasis on fun for younger runners.

"Just look at what's happening in places like Seattle," Bowker pointed out. "Marathon races there draw 3,000 to 4,000 runners. On TV, I've seen three separate companies using runners in their advertising. That tells me something about the growth of the sport.

Could be, but a common complaint among runners is boredom and loneliness.

"It's been lonely in the past," Bowker conceded, "but it won't be in a couple of years. You'll be going out with other people and after you finish, you'll get together for a glass of juice — or whatever — and talk about your time, even if it's 20 minutes for two miles. This is what's happening to the running game, especially in the U.S."

"Whiplash!"

U.S. Skier Still On Serious List

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Ron Biedermann of the U.S. ski team underwent a second operation Friday and was listed in serious condition as the result of a fall in training on Thursday.

Biedermann, of Stowe, Vt., had been training on the Hintertuxer glacier near here with other members of the ski team.

He fractured his upper left thigh and received unspecified injuries to his left knee, local authorities said. However, doctors said the injuries may be of a more serious nature.

"He's receiving the best medical care possible," said Kelly Maudsley, a spokesman at the ski team's headquarters in Park City, Utah. Maudsley said Biedermann underwent surgery less than an hour after the accident Thursday.

Doug Powell, another member of the U.S. squad from Stowe, fell Tuesday when he collided with an official in the finish area. He was taken to the clinic's urological department, suffering bruised kidneys. Doctors put him under observation but had not performed any surgery.

Besides the Americans, a number of other top skiers also were injured. Elena Matous, an Italian skiing for Iran, and Austrian Edith Peter were also sidetracked with injuries.

Burkinshaw Stops Mighty Mt. Douglas

Goalkeeper Geoff Burkinshaw of Reynolds was the Craig Nettles of the Greater Victoria High School Boys Soccer League, Friday.

The result was a 1-0 victory for the Roadrunners and the first defeat of the season for Mt. Doug, which had scored 51 goals in their first six league games. Thistles are in third place.

Reynolds, with a record of 5-3, is in fourth place.

But if Burkinshaw was good, think what has been happening to Vic High and the Tyees' goalkeeper, Robbie Kaye.

The Tyees moved to within two points of first-place Spectrum with a 4-0 victory over Belmont Braves and that was accomplished by a shutout too.

Kaye got the blanking. But for him it was old hat.

The Vic High goalkeeper hasn't been scored on in seven games this season. Vic High has six wins and a tie in seven games and holds a game in hand over Spectrum whom they trail by two points.

Enrique Tudela scored three goals for the Tyees with Dave Barnes getting a single. Mark Wyatt of Vic High was injured in the game and taken to hospital for observation and treatment of a heel injury.

Silvia Survives Wind-Swept Test

ROANOKE, Tex. (AP) — Long-hitting Silvia Bertolaccini mastered gusting winds and an unfamiliar golf course to score an even-par 72 and grab the first-round lead Friday in a $75,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

The 28-year-old Argentina native, who now lives in Dallas, registered four birdies on the windswept, newly-opened course for a one-stroke lead over five players who struggled to one-over-par 73s.

Locked in a tie for second going into today's second round were Lynn Adams, Sandra Spuzich, Joyce Kazmierski, Mary Dwyer and Sandra Palmer.

Olympic Fuss Studied

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Federal authorities are investigating the troubled Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee for possible financial irregularities in its preparations for the 1980 Winter Olympics.

In a copyrighted story today, Ottaway News Service says federal auditors have uncovered "apparent irregularities" in the awarding of construction contracts, and found other questionable financial practices such as "double-dipping" by committee employees for travel expenses.

The story, by Ottaway reporters Marilyn Wright and Stephen Druchler, says investigators also are looking into possible conflicts of interest among Olympic organizers, nepotism, and high-living by committee members during their international travel on committee business.

The Economic Development Administration (EDA) in Washington confirmed that because of the audit findings, it had assigned its investigations unit to probe the LPOC.

The organizing committee currently is facing multi-million-dollar deficits both in its construction and administrative budgets. And at least part of the deficit in the administrative budget appears to stem from the kinds of practices under investigation by the federal government.

The EDA funnels federal money for Olympics construction—$58 million has been appropriated so far—to organizers.

"Having been associated with this committee from the beginning, I have no fear of this investigation," said Rev. J. Bernard Fell, president of the organizing committee.

Most of the facilities being built or renovated for the 1980 Games are running over budget, and several are months behind schedule. The committee is being sued by two fund-raising companies that charge the committee is more than two months late in paying a $1.6 million bill.

BOWLERS OF WEEK

Kim Wilson and Bill Bell, bowling at different lanes, collected fivepin laurels during first week of 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Kim captured women's honors with 237-373-302 — 912 series in Sunday Niters League at Mayfair Lanes and Bill collected the men's award with 269-308-344 — 921 series in Wednesday Major League at Town and Country Lanes.

Tenpin winners were Sue Jubb and Ken Grexton.

Sue took women's laurels with 175-220-209 — 604 series rolled in All-Stars League and Ken collected men's honors with 237-214-224 — 675 series in Friday Niters League. In addition to earning weekly awards, all four captured berths in season-end Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Bullets Are on Target

The Bullets received their 1977-78 championship rings from National Basketball Association commissioner Larry O'Brien in ceremonies prior to Friday night's season opener. They then went out and raced to a 17-4 lead over New Orleans and were never headed, starting their title defence with an impressive 117-101 victory.

"I told the players before the game that the ring was symbolic," said Washington coach Dick Motta. "It's a confidence builder. I wanted to wear it during the game. It's difficult to explain . . . there's something being champion.

"But it's history now and the job is ahead of us."

The job is to repeat as champion, something no team has done in the last decade, not since Boston Celtics in 1968 and 1969.

"That's our goal," said Motta. "We've been there and we enjoyed it. We want to go back."

In other NBA season openers, Denver Nuggets trimmed San Antonio Spurs 118-117, Houston Rockets beat New York Knicks 111-107, Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Celtics 115-101, Philadelphia 76ers topped Los Angeles Lakers 110-102, New Jersey Nets edged Detroit Pistons 107-105, Indiana Pacers downed Atlanta Hawks 117-104, Phoenix Suns beat San Diego Clippers 128-114 and Seattle SuperSonics defeated Chicago Bulls 104-86.

Elvin Hayes, Larry Wright and Mitch Kupchak scored 18 points apiece for the Bullets, who led 57-38 at the half and were never in trouble.

New Orleans shot 35 per cent in the first half and 41 per cent for the game, with scoring star Pete Maravich connecting on just seven of 24. The Pistol was playing with a brace on his right knee, which was operated on during the off-season.

David Thompson's stuff shot with 23 seconds left capped a 27-point game and broke the final tie as the Nuggets edged the Spurs. A free throw with eight seconds to play by newcomer Charlie Scott provided the margin of victory as San Antonio's Larry Kenon, who scored 20 of his 38 points in the fourth quarter, hit a basket at the buzzer.

Moses Malone scored 29 points and grabbed 20 rebounds in outplaying New York's $3-million free agent, Marvin Webster.

Dennis Johnson scored 26 points for Seattle and Lonnie Shelton, obtained as compensation after the Knicks signed Webster, came off the bench to add 18.

Andretti, Lauda Stay Put As Cockpit Swaps Begin

LONDON (Reuter) — American Mario Andretti and Austrian Niki Lauda, the man he deposed as world champion, appear to be the only leading Formula One drivers staying with their teams for the 1979 Grand Prix auto racing season.

The annual bout of cockpit swaps began long before this year's series ended in Canada last Sunday and will as usual be resolved by the time next year's exhausting 16-round battle gets under way in Buenos Aires on Jan. 21.

Definite are the new driver line-ups at Ferrari, Brabham, Lotus and Matra. Wolf, McLaren and Tyrrell, among the other top teams, have given no outward indication of their intentions, but the Formula One circus is rife with well-sourced rumours.

Andretti, goes into his fourth successive season with Lotus partnered by Carlos Reutemann of Argentina. Andretti was believed to have much to do with persuading Reutemann to join Lotus from the Italian Ferrari camp. Between them, the pair won 10 races this season and will be the team to beat, even though rivals already are building cars with ground-hugging aerodynamic skirts which helped Lotus dominate on so many circuits.

South African Jody Scheckter started all the transfer dealings by announcing his intention to join Ferrari after a poor season with Wolf.

Scheckter joins Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., who opened his Grand Prix account by winning last Sunday, a fitting climax to his apprenticeship year with Ferrari.

The vacancy at Canadian oil millionaire Walter Wolf's team is more than likely to be filled by former world champion James Hunt of Britain. Hunt had a lean time with McLaren this year and has said he wants to eo ilto his last year of major racing with Harvey Postlethwaite, the man who designed the Hesketh car which launched him in Formula One. American Bobby Rahal should be the other Wolf driver.

Northern Ireland's John Watson, renowned as the unluckiest driver in the championship with just one victory in Austria two years ago, is about to switch to McLaren who should have a new car next season. Watson, the No. 2 to Lauda at Brabham, left that team following a mutual agreement with director Bernie Ecclestone. Watson's partner will be Frenchman Patrick Tambay.

Lauda, content at Brabham but anxious for a third world title, has Brazilian Nelson Piquet as his new partner. Piquet, who already has a little Formula One experience, made his mark in Formula Three, the traditional proving ground for young prospects.

Long-serving Tyrrell driver Patrick Depailler has quit to join the all-French Matra set-up where fellow Frenchman Jacques Laffite has been campaigning for a couple of seasons.

Depailler's departure has left Ken Tyrrell with a few problems. Not only has there been speculation about the continued financial backing of his French and American sponsors but Didier Pironi of France, his other driver, is being wooed by Renault.

Tyrrell probably will wait until all the dust has settled in the transfer market before naming his sponsors and drivers.

Italian Riccardo Patrese probably will be joined by German Jochen Mass at Arrows because Sweden's Gunnar Nilsson still is not fit enough for racing following a series of operations which has left him a spectator all season.

John Surtees should keep Italian newcomer Beppe Gabbiani on for another season and Shadow will probably have Dutchman Jan Lammers, joint leader in the current European Formula Three championship with one round remaining, American Danny Ongais, may join him there.

Promising Irishman Derek Daly stays with ensign and Swiss Clay Regazzoni is likely to partner Australian Alan Jones, a good outside tip for next year's title, at Williams.

Islanders in Trouble

Kerry Park Islanders needed help before the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League season started and things haven't changed much for the better.

Rob Parker scored both goals for Kerry Park.

Kerry Park goalkeepers Mike Wylie and Tony Burns bore the brunt of the Blues' attack, making a combined total of 54 saves. Gord Draibye stopped 28 shots for Esquimalt.

Whitecaps Adopting New Image

VANCOUVER (CP) - Vancouver Whitecaps are adopting a new logo and team colors for the 1979 North American Soccer League (NASL) season.

The new graphics feature a change in team colors to cyan and royal blue on white, from red and white.

The team said in a news release that the two blues were selected because of the team's geographical location and the connotation of the team name to water.

The Whitecaps' home uniforms will be predominantly white, while the road uniform will feature a royal blue jersey.

NELFORD RECOVERS TO SHARE TOP SPOT

NIMES, France (AP) — Jim Nelford, a first-year pro on the United States PGA circuit from Burnaby, fired a two-under par 70 Friday to grab a share of the lead in the world under-25 professional golf championship.

Nelford's 142 total after two rounds put him in a tie with first-day leader, Phil Hancock of the U.S., who soared to a 76 after an opening round 66.

Golf Delayed By Weather

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Ray Floyd of the United States birdied four holes in a row and went on to take a three-hole lead over fellow American Tom Watson after 18 holes of their second-round match in the $260,000 World Match Play golf championship Friday.

The 36-hole match was delayed for nearly five hours by heavy mist and was due to be completed today.

Floyd hit an eagle and six birdies and tamed the 6,969-yard, par 35-38—73 Wentworth course with a seven-under-par 66.

Isao Aoki of Japan led five times winner Gary Player of South Africa by three holes. Simon Owen of New Zealand was one-up on Spain's Sevvy Ballesteros. Defending champion Graham Marsh of Australia had a four-hole lead over British hopeful Nick Faldo.

All four matches were set to be resumed today.

The final, scheduled for Sunday, now is set for Monday. The winner will pick up a prize of $60,000.

Veteran Pro Leads Tokai Tee Tourney

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Veteran pro Masaji Kusakabe took the lead after the third round of the $172,000 Tokai golf tournament today, shooting a six-under-par 66 for a six-under 54-hole total of 210.

Kosaku Shimada, the second round co-leader who had a third-round 71, was one stroke behind the leader.

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Ayako Okamoto and Michiko Okada both shot three-under-par 71s today to tie for the first-round lead of the $38,900 Tokai women's golf tournament.

Nancy Lopez, playing with a cold, had a bad start in the 36-hole tournament, shooting a four-over-par 78 to share 21st place with three Japanese pros.

MOSLEY WAIVED

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Free agent forward Glenn Mosley has been waived by San Antonio Spurs, bringing the team to the 11-player National Basketball Association limit.

Bettors Don't Like Winner

NEW DELHI (AP) — Police fired tear gas near a crowd today at a race track in Hyderabad, South India, to disperse disgruntled bettors who created a disturbance after a longshot named Canyon won the fourth race.

When the horse was declared the winner, the crowd broke apart benches and set fire to them, the United News of India said.

Police on the scene failed to restrain the crowd by swinging cane sticks and called for reinforcements with tear gas.

The remaining three races were cancelled.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home, protection, affection and security command attention. Family member wants to smash budget for "improvements". Be diplomatic, but continue to stand firm on principles. Yes, delay works in your favor. Transaction will be completed in beneficial manner.

BEWARE THE BANANA SKIN

Mistakes in the opening are made by all classes of players, and the run-of-the-mill chess fan can be forgiven for experiencing a degree of smug delight when a Grandmaster, or even a Master, slips on a banana skin in the early moves.

Even if you are sure that you can never be caught in the opening, NEVER take anything for granted at the board. Keeping this ever in mind, you can avoid a lot of chess pratfalls.

YOUNG MAN IN A HURRY

I had the pleasure of directing the 23rd Annual Junior Open in Seattle, July 30 to August 4. The event attracted 82 players, among them a young lad from Switzerland, Jueny Herzcog (who is at least of Expert strength); two brothers from Alaska, and 12 players from California. But none of these was a match for young Yasser Seirawan, 17, playing on his home turf.

Two weeks earlier, he had won the U.S. Junior Closed Championship in Memphis. In the Open, Yasser won seven and drew one, this with Rayan Ayvar of Lompoc, California.

Seirawan is rapidly moving toward the front rank of U.S. players. His style of play shows extremely clearly that he is a player of great talent. Already he is one of the very best rapid-transit players in the entire country.

Another young man to watch, though perhaps a few miles down the chess road, is Pedro Marcel of Palo Alto. He won the Under-13 trophy at the Junior Open.

Subdued Tories Playing for TV Ratings

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Don't adjust your TV set. The Honorable Gentlemen of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition have started behaving like . . . uh . . . gentlemen.

There was nothing wrong with the audio Thursday if you tuned in the Parliament Hill Show and couldn't hear any catcalls, hoots, insults or desk banging by Conservative MP's.

The Tories have taken a cue from the afternoon TV game shows that compete with the Commons debates for audiences by substituting desk banging with hand clapping.

"We want to show a little more decorum in the Commons," says Tory "Whip" Steve Paprowski, the Alberta MP who has the job of chaperoning the behavior of his Conservative colleagues.

"Although desk banging has become the traditional way MPs express their support, it just didn't go over on TV," he said in an interview.

Since the televising of Commons proceedings began a year ago, Paprowski and MPs of every party have been getting a message that the voters were upset over seemingly rowdy antics.

"We discussed the problem in caucus and made a decision that applause, hand clapping, would be more appropriate."

The Tories, who broke the long tradition by hand clapping enthusiastically when party leader Joe Clark rose to speak, behaved as politely as guests at a royal tea party when it was Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's turn to address the Commons.

"Silence, just complete silence," commented Paprowski, describing the etiquette Tory MPs are to follow when a prominent Liberal speaks.

Although only time will tell whether Tory MPs can restrain themselves in the heat of debate, Paprowski says that shouted insults and interruptions have a counter-productive effect on TV audiences.

One of the problems is that only the microphone of the MP recognized by Commons Speaker James Jerome to address the House is turned on.

As a result, even the wittiest interruption that has MPs and reporters in convulsions of laughter comes across on TV as a dull roar.

Echoing Clark's frequent theme that the Liberals have been stealing Tory policies as the government shifts to the ideological 'right,' Paprowski speculated that it "may only be a matter of time" before the Liberals also adopt his party's latest initiative in parliamentary etiquette.

For the time being, though, the Liberals show no sign of changing.

They're taking their lead from Trudeau who goaded the Tories by stating they are a party that would abandon British parliamentary tradition. His Liberal supporters, in response, banged their desks enthusiastically.

Respirin Gets Okay To Test Cancer Cure

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — The federal health and welfare department has given Respirin Corp. of Toronto permission to test a herbal product on humans as a possible treatment for cancer, the chairman of Respirin says.

Dr. P. B. Rynard, also Progressive Conservative MP for Simcoe North, said:

"I don't believe it will cure all kinds of cancer but we certainly wish it would."

Dr. Rynard said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that many university researchers are anxious to test the herbal substance, which was developed by Rene Caisse, a 90-year-old registered nurse from Bracebridge, Ont., 55 kilometres north of Orillia.

Miss Caisse began treating cancer sufferers 40 years ago in her home, using a herbal remedy obtained from an area Indian, Dr. Rynard said.

The remedy, which some believe stops the growth of tumors, came to be known as Essaic — Miss Caisse's named spelled backward.

Dr. Rynard said Miss Caisse signed an agreement with the Respirin pharmaceutical firm to allow negotiations for formal testing.

Drug Case Sentence Delayed

Sentencing of two Victoria men found guilty last month of conspiracy to traffic in hashish was adjourned in county court Friday until Oct. 30.

Defence counsel Douglas Christie, on behalf of Russell Tschritter, 33, said he had just received a pre-sentence report and had consented the previous day when Finall said an adjournment would be sought. The Crown's adjournment request was reasonable and in the interests of the defence, he said.

James William Buckner, 35, representing himself, said he didn't like the idea of a delay but agreed because he wants to question the author of his pre-sentence report.

Judge Montague Drake had it not been for the defence wanting more time, he would not have consented to the adjournment.

Both men were found guilty by a jury Sept. 13 of conspiring between themselves and others unknown between July 15, 1975, and Jan. 6, 1976, to traffic in cannabis resin. Buckner alone was also found guilty of possession of a kilo of cannabis resin for the purpose of trafficking. Both men remain on bail.

Juvenile Vandalism Blamed

Police blame juveniles in Sidney for the destruction of dozens of potted flowers and plants in the downtown area late Thursday.

Sidney RCMP said numerous decorative plant boxes were vandalized sometime Thursday night on the south side of Beacon Ave., for two blocks west of Third St.

Police have no estimate on the amount of damage done and no suspects.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old woman was given a six-month jail term after pleading guilty Friday in Victoria provincial court to uttering a forged prescription.

Judge William Ostler handed the sentence to Tracy Lee Harris, no fixed address, and said he would strongly recommend the sentence be served at Twin Maples, an institution which is involved in the treatment of drug addiction.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Miss Harris went to a doctor's office May 29 and obtained a prescription for the drug Fiorinal under the name Patterson.

After receiving the prescription, Mulligan said, Miss Harris then changed the amount of pills from 15 to 45.

Mulligan said the young woman had a criminal history which was likely to be drug related: Dec. 23, 1976, possession of stolen property, for which she was fined $250 and placed on six months' probation; Feb. 16, 1977, possession of a narcotic, for which she received a suspended sentence and one year's probation; and March 22, 1978, theft over $200 (a doctor's bag and contents) and mischief causing wilful damage, for which she received another suspended sentence and two year's probation.

Another 19-year-old was given a 14-day jail term after pleading guilty to disobeying a bail order on two counts.

Stephen Brent Fairbairn, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to the bail breach by being out past a 10 p.m. nightly curfew imposed Tuesday by Ostler.

Fairbairn pleaded guilty to a breaking and entering Monday at the Mt. Everest Restaurant, 1241 Government, during which a quantity of liquor and a credit card were stolen.

Ostler remanded Fairbairn until Oct. 31 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing and released the youth on conditions he report immediately to a bail supervisor and obey a 10 p.m. nightly curfew.

Mulligan said Fairbairn was spotted by Victoria city police Thursday night at about 11:30 p.m. in the 700-block Johnson and was apprehended after a short chase by officers. Mulligan also said the youth had not reported to the bail supervisor as ordered.

A 20-year-old man who tried to siphone gasoline at a service station was fined $100 for the attempted theft and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work for mischief causing wilful damage.

Richard Wayne Davis, 2930 Mt. Newton Cross Road, entered guilty pleas to both charges but said a co-accused woman had nothing to do with the incident.

Mulligan stated Davis was driving south on the Pat Bay Highway about 2:50 a.m., Sept. 23, when he ran out of gas.

After getting his vehicle into a Gulf service station at 5498 Pat Bay Highway, Mulligan said, Davis tried to cut an air hose and finally twisted it off and had removed the gas cap from a parked vehicle when Saanich police arrived.

When asked what he was doing, Davis reportedly replied, "We ran out of gas, can you tell me where there's a gas station?"

Beside the fine and work, Ostler also placed Davis on six months' probation and ordered him to attend the Metchosin camp program.

Barry Arthur Scroggs, 24, of 1005 McKenzie, was fined $75 after plading guilty to impeding the B.C. Ferries vessel Queen of Victoria in Active Pass on July 30.

Crown counsel Barbara Yates told the court the B.C. Ferries vessel was heading southward in Active Pass about 9:45 a.m. when Scrogg's fishing boat was spotted in mid-channel. Yates said the bigger vessel gave five blasts of the whistle but still had to take evasive action at the last moment.

Defence-lawyer Peter Freeman said his client's vessel had its motor engaged but appeared not to be moving because it was running against a strong tide.

* * *

A 35-year-old woman who failed to appear for an Oct. 5 trial on nine counts of false pretences was charged with two more offences.

Leslie Marie Manning, formerly of 1020 Balmoral, was charged further with defrauding the Human Resources Ministry of approximately $1,000 and with making a false statement in connection with welfare payments.

She was released on $500 recognizance with one or two sureties and remanded until next Friday for election of her trial method.

* * *

Marcel Dale Thibert was released on a $200 cash deposit and remanded until Oct. 27 for plea.

* * *

Specialized Tool Boxes Ready for Any Emergency

By A. J. HAND
(c) 1978, Popular Science

Any well-equipped homeowner should have the basic tools and materials he needs to keep his house in order. Two types that are basic to the smooth operation of any home are plumbing and electrical tools.

Both are rarely used at your workbench. Most often you have to take them to the trouble spot — to the leaking faucet or the defective wall switch. This is a lot easier than picking individual tools off a perforated hardboard tool board, then fumbling them all the way to your work.

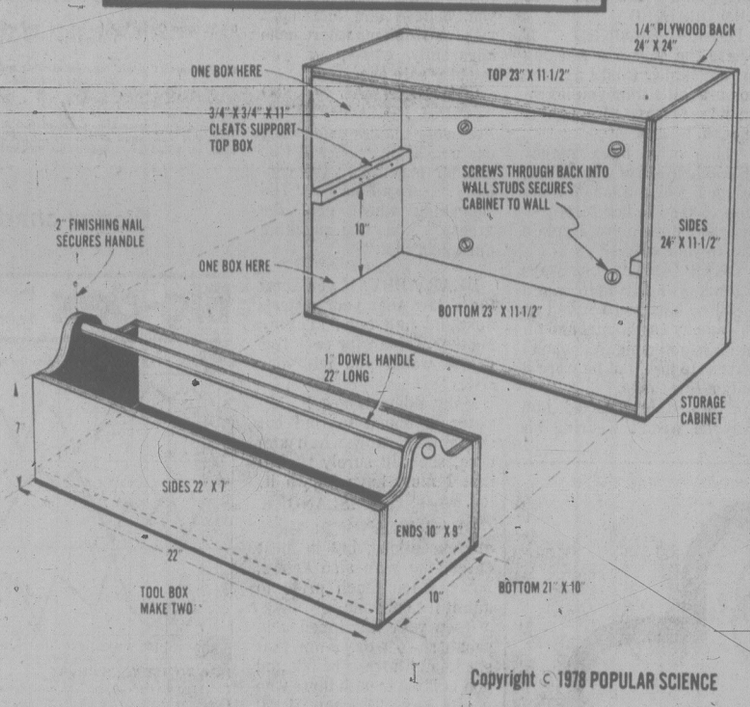
Shown in the sketch is a simple design for a pair of boxes I made for my plumbing and electrical tools. Also shown is an open-faced cabinet I fastened to my shop wall to hold the boxes between jobs.

I made the boxes out of half-inch plywood.

Cut the parts to size then fasten them together with two-inch nails and white glue. Note that the bottom of the tote box fits inside the ends and sides. This is stronger than fastening it to the bottoms of these pieces.

The carrying handle is made of hardwood dowel. Drill the ends of the boxes with a one-inch bit to accept the handle, then glue the handle in place and secure it with a single two-inch finishing nail at each end. It's a good idea to drill pilot holes for these nails to prevent any splitting of the dowels.

The cabinet for the boxes is also made of half-inch plywood with a back of quarter-inch plywood. Use hardboard instead of plywood for the back if you want. The back gives the cabinet strength, and lets you fasten it to your shop wall. Just drive four 2½ in. roundhead screws with washers through the back and into your wall studs. That will hold the cabinet securely on the wall.



Copyright © 1978 POPULAR SCIENCE

Paint the boxes and cabinet if you like. I've always planned to, but haven't got around to it yet. At any rate, label the boxes so you know which is which. I apply put a big "E" on one and a "P" on the other, using a felt marking pen.

What goes in the boxes? My plumbing box contains a pair of pipe wrenches (one usually won't be of much use) a bunch of assorted pipe fittings, solder, steel wool, pipe joint dope, faucet washers, scraps of pipe, a tube cutter, plus a bunch of other odds and ends.

The electrical box contains wire, fuses, spare switches and outlets, junction boxes, wire nuts, cable connectors, wire strippers, electrical tape, lineman's pliers, a couple of testers, and a screwdriver. There's also a large selection of "junk" I've accumulated over the years.

That's it. Build your boxes and cabinet. Label the boxes and fill them up. Then put them in the cabinet. If you are lucky, you'll never have to take them out.

Russia Seeks 'Levi Fever' Cure

By NIKKI FINKE

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian authorities hope that Orbita may be the cure for the persistent Levi Fever afflicting Russian teen-agers.

No, Orbita is no miracle drug. And Levi Fever? Well, perhaps it can be defined by two bizarre examples:

Five Communist Youth League members recently chased a youth through the streets of Tbilisi in Soviet Georgia demanding he give up his Western-made denims. He refused, and the gang stabbed him and fled with the pants. Also in Georgia, two girls were left wounded and pantless by two 15-year-old girls carrying knives and razor blades.

Though extreme, these two stories show the importance Western-made jeans have in the lives of fashion-conscious young people here.

It has Russians authorities so worried that they've developed the new fabric for blue jeans called Orbita, which they say is equal in quality to Western denim, known for its toughness and endurance.

At present, however, the material is being kept as secret as blue prints for a new bomber. Repeated attempts by a U.S. reporter to see the fabric have been met by a firm "Nyet" by the ministry of light industry and the director of the jeans-producing factory.

Russian-made blue jeans are generally scorned by Soviet young people, who will gladly pay five or even 10 times their price of 23 or 25 rubles — about $38 — for denims smuggled from the West.

And this with good reason: Russian jeans are sloppily sewn and of cotton so thin and lifeless that they hang on a teen-ager's body instead of hug it like U.S. denims.

DEODORIZER FOR PIG FARMS

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A substance that comes from cactus and is used to put a foamy head on soda pop has been adapted to develop a product to make the world smell sweeter, especially down on the farm.

The product is heralded as safe and simple and is designed to tackle one of life's most difficult environmental problems — odors that come downwind from the barnyards or large animal confinement areas.

Enviromental suits protesting the location of piggeries, beef fattening and poultry raising facilities too close to civilization have proliferated in the U.S. in recent years. Animal raisers contend the suits increase the cost of food and reduce supply.

Cargill, the company that developed the product, hails it as a breakthrough in liquid waste-control treatment that reduces odors by speeding the decomposition of animal waste.

Heaven knows it's hard enough to find a one-of-a-kind dress in Victoria . . . let alone in all of Western Canada . . . but that's exactly what you will find now at Roy Imports . . . The dresses we're talking about have just arrived from England . . . They have the Windmoor "Couturier" label . . . the prestige line that Windmoor will only sell to very elite stores . . . We're not exaggerating one iota when we tell you these 2-pce. wool challis dresses are really superb! . . . The skirts are cut with an artfulness you wouldn't believe . . . Prints are so very different we won't even attempt to describe them, beyond saying that skirts have floral designs . . . and colors are soft and tremendously flattering! . . . One is all dusty pinks and greens . . . A dirndl skirt prettily shaped with panels and plain band around the hem . . . Tuck in top . . . and a big matching square shawl . . . Size 12 . . . Another size 12 has all-round pleated skirt and a top with gathered yoke and mandarin collar which you leave open . . . and silk cord tie belt . . . Lovely inky colors! . . . Another . . . (there are two of these . . . sizes 10 and 14) also has a pleated skirt with beautiful florals in mulberry, green and teal . . . Co-ordinated print top . . . And a younger style, size 10 . . . reminds us of a tapestry . . . Ingeniously yoked skirt for a very slimming effect . . . big, big shawl . . . $145 for this, while the others are all $225 at . . . Roy Imports, 435 Simcoe St., 384-4932 and 9807 Third St., Sidney, 656-3522.

Think of these for Christmas . . .

Well, it's mid-October so we suppose we can start hinting about Christmas without calling down too much opprobrium! . . . A tour of Beston's Lighting Exclusive the other day made us suddenly think what a good idea their new desk and reading lamps are for Christmas gifts! As well as being completely functional and efficient, they are so attractive now! . . . There are so many variations . . . in a multitude of colors . . . along with chrome, brass, copper and modernistic painted metal bases . . . all holding 100 watt bulbs . . . in desk, floor and tree lamps . . . Scissors lamps which fasten to the wall and can be pulled out in any direction . . . Lamps that clamp on a shelf, or bed headboard . . . or indeed anywhere that needs a special spot of light . . . Shelf lamps with a flat, weighted base are great for a small desk . . . the top of a bookcase . . . wherever space is at a premium . . . These are also great as plant lamps. Clip-on lamps are fine too for babying your plants . . . Can be stuck on the back of a chair, and with a special plant bulb, which Beston's also sell . . . will do wonders for your growing things . . . We might add, here that clamp lights are equipped with rubber so they won't mar even fine furniture! . . . (Talking about these plant lights . . . they create special energy and wave lenghts for growing healthy plants indoors . . . Fine for germinating seeds . . . and we think you'll probably want one for yourself!) . . . There are pole lamps with three heads accommodating 100-watt bulbs which turn in all directions . . . Desk and floor lamps to match . . . Lots of other intriguing reading lamps at . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

You'll be seeing more sandals than ever right through this fall and winter . . . probably because the new soft, feminine fashions call for delicate shoes in the same mood . . . We saw the new Bandolinos at Munday's this week . . . and noticed that . . . while light and dainty . . . there's a hint of a cowboy influence in a lot of the heels and sole extensions . . . Bandolinos, from Italy, are extremely popular . . . They fit so well, and always look wonderful! . . . "Roper" . . . in black or Mexican brown . . . definitely has that cowboy look we told you about . . . This one's not a sandal, but has a sole extension with natural finish, and high gored front . . . High heel is stacked . . . $51 . . . "Daly" is high stacked heel sandal with padded insole . . . Comes in antique camel kid and navy kid . . . $47 . . . "Davy" . . . in Mexican burnished calf brown only . . . has a closed back and instep strap . . . Just a few pairs left, priced at $47 . . . In the lower heeled models, there's "Calvin", whose vamp is made up of multi shades of beige with raw edges . . . a very natural look . . . Also in multi shades of beige, red, brown and navy, at $45 . . . "Chitty" is a Mexican brown and beige sandal with leather threaded though the vamp by way of trim . . . "Campi" is a lovely soft leather slide in antique camel . . . $45 . . . An "Elisa" . . . the only one without a padded insole . . . is a dessier sandal in camel, dark brown or black suede . . . tagged at $45 . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 393-2211.

There's a Rodier, from France . . . fine wool crepe with tiny madarin neck . . . newer-than-new skinny sleeve and little slits at either side. This is sort of a "forever" dress which practically anyone can wear with aplomb . . . Shows off your diamonds, pearls or gold jewellery to perfection . . . Another black daytime dress is a knife-pleated wool with tight sleeve and fullness in the skirt . . . A soft smock dress in black wool jersey has a low square neck with tiny tucks back and front, Buttons down the side . . . For partying, there are three absolute stunners . . . A real disco dress of filmy black chiffon with narrow-strapped, tucked bodic . . . flowing dancing skirt . . . A black silk crepe tied on the shoulder . . . low V front and back . . . Getting married? Then head first for Eaton's . . .

A girl we know who was married in August has just thanked us profusely for telling her about Eaton's Bridal Registry . . . She was thrilled at receiving so many of the things she really wanted . . . in the colors and patterns she'd selected . . . And so very FEW things she couldn't really use, from people who'd neglected to consult her Preference List at Eaton's. Now, we don't want to sound crass . . . but the fact remains that brides are inevitably going to be given wedding and shower gifts . . . so isn't it just being sensible to give them gifts they really want and need? . . . When brides are registered at Eaton's they're doing their relatives and friends a favor . . . making it easy for them to select things that are truly "to our taste" . . . as our young friend puts it . . . Moreover, there's such a wide choice that friends can select gifts which suit their pocketbook . . . without any embarassment . . . We personally think every bride-to-be should contact Eaton's Bridal Registry just as soon as is decently possible after the question has been popped . . . She should there fill in her Preference List . . . select her invitations, announcements, thank-you cards, etc. . . . (Eaton's will take care of the printing) . . . The bridal consultants will gladly advise her on any point she needs help with . . . and give her some super gifts . . . A Bride's Book and a silver coffee spoon in her choice of Oneida patterns along with a booklet "Entertaining is Fun!" If there's a wedding in your future . . . pay an early visit to . . . Eaton's Bridal Registry, 382-7141, loc. 373.

Travelling without tears . . .

Fairly recently we had a graphic illustration of just what a difference the right travel agency can make when you fare forth from home . . . Naming no names and being as unspecific as possible . . . The people we speak of took a longish trip a few months ago . . . arranged by a certain travel agency . . . only to return disgruntled and dissatisfied wth arrangements and accommodations . . . Now they're away again . . . bookings, accommodations and everything else taken care of by Paulin Travel . . . Paulin's arranged everything to the Queen's taste . . . their flight bookings . . . good hotel rooms . . . motor-coach tours at the appropriate places etc. . . . A perfectly-planned holiday from every point of view! . . . There's a reason behind all this: Paulin's people are no arm-chair travellers . . . they've actually covered much of the ground themselves . . . or if they haven't, they make pretty darn sure that everything lives up to promise! Then, again, Paulin's are such an old-established agency that they're known far and wide . . . and don't think that isn't important when you're far from home! . . . So if you're planning a trip . . . anywhere in the world . . . see Paulin's . . . Naturally there's no charge to you for their super-service . . . and with their travel know-how, they may actually save you money! . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-0168.

DEAR ABBY: I am desperate and in tears. I can't take it anymore! I have a 7-year-old son who still wets his bed. I have taken him to our pediatrician who sent us to a urologist. They both said there was nothing physically wrong with the boy.

I have spanked him, taken away his favorite TV shows, and even told him he couldn't play ourdoors or go any place special if he wet the bed the night before.

I even tried making him wash his own pajamas and the bedsheet, but that didn't help.

To top it all off, my 4-year-old who stopped wetting his bed two years ago has now started in again! I guess he thinks if his big brother does it, it's okay for him, too!

My 7-year-old quit for five days straight before his birthday because he thought he'd get more presents, so I know he can quit.

I'm expecting another baby in four months. Then I'll have THREE kids wetting the bed.

I am ready to give up hope. Please help me, Abby! — HOPELESS

DEAR HOPELESS: If the doctors assure you that there is nothing physically wrong with the boy, try the "Wet Alarm" (Sears' catalogue lists it).

I've had hundreds of readers tell me that this solved the problem when all else failed. I hope it works for you, but if it doesn't, quietly change the sheets and make no mention of the wet bed whatsoever. No shaming and no punishments. Just total silence.

DEAR ABBY: I am a former GI, married to a girl from Southeast Asia. My problem is that she keeps after me constantly to send money over there to her family. I have been sending as much as I can, but it keeps me broke.

Abby, we are depriving ourselves of the necessities — like a telelphone and new tires for our old car. We can't even pay some of our own bills, and she keeps begging and begging me to send more and more to her people. I work to support her and that's all I can do.

Please advise us both, Abby. And thank you. — 30 AND DRAINED

DEAR DRAINED: If you're the only one working in your family (and I assume you are), it's time you learned how to say, "Enough is enough."

Those who have money should help those who do not, but you should allocate a set sum to send to her family — and not a dime more. Explain this to your wife.

DEAR ABBY: I always wanted my husband to wear a wedding band, so I saved up my money and bought one for him. He acted pleased when I gave it to him, but he wore it only a few times.

Every time I asked him why he wasn't wearing his wedding band, he'd say, "I forgot it."

I just couldn't believe he was that forgetful, but when I try to get the real reason out of him, he gets mad and won't talk, and I end up crying myself to sleep.

I finally came to the conclusion that either he doesn't want to be married, or he doesn't want other people to know he's married.

Outside of this, he's a wonderful husband and father and he says he loves me. What do you think? — HURT

DEAR HURT: If he's a wonderful husband and father and he says he loves you, believe him and don't look for problems where none apparently exists, or you might create one.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "YOUNG PHILOSOPHER": For every maxim expressing one philosophy, you will find another expressing the contrary. Example: "The squeaking wheel gets the grease." And "the quacking duck gets shot."

DEAR ABBY: If you knew for a fact that your sister's husband had been keeping another woman for over five years, would you tell your sister?

Many others know it. My sister is bound to find out some way, and when she does, she will surely realize that I must have known it, too. ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: There are exceptions, but in most cases, the wife also knows, but has too much pride to admit it to anyone.

Keep your lip zipped, and should she one day admit that she knows, please be big and don't chime in with those who would say, "I knew it all along."

Biodex chart for Sunday

Bio-dex BIO-DEX for Oct.15/78 Your computerized biorhythm
By Ken J. Michaels

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

6-10 Neutral Cycle- A low in the intellectual cycle could cause a loss of concentration. Listen to instructions and avoid the error.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Your clear thinking and good judgment will make you popular. Don't let this go to your head.

When the police investigate a crime they look for a pattern - known as the M.O. Perhaps another useful tool would be the biorhythm charts of known criminals. A pattern could well be found that would show when a regular police "customer" was most likely to break the law again. Increased surveillance on these critical days minght well help to minimize crime.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- A new challenge has to be faced. Make a special effort to be cheerful to overcome your low Bio-dex.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Well-meaning friends may only confuse an important issue. Try to think things through on your own.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Begin the week with a smile. Nothing offsets those Monday blues more than a high Bio-dex.

We all have to live under some sort of "authority", but how we resent it sometimes! Your boss will usually more unreasonable than others. Try to understand this if it is the case. Then the day levels which cause such erratic moods. My advice is to be patient and cheerful. It may not do any good, but your impatience or grumpiness will probably make matters much worse.

Croc's Smile Not from Satisfaction

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: To make your crocodile smile feed him once in a while. Have you ever heard that saying? I was told it really means only feed a crocodile once in a while, that it will get indigestion otherwise. Is this right? Can you overfeed a crocodile? — W.V.

DEAR W.V.: Actually, most crocodilians tend to smile — sort of — all of the time. They seldom overeat. Adults feed infrequently; young growing crocodilians should feed more frequently but due to unfavorable conditions, especially in captivity, often don't. These often suffer from malnutrition and not infrequently, hypoglycemia with signs ranging from tremors to torpor. When the young don't eat every few days, environmental changes are indicated. Force feeding is occasionally required.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: My doctor just gave me a tetanus booster. It makes me wonder if my dog and cat need them too? — F.F.

DEAR F.F.: No, canines and felines infrequently develop tetanus since they are much more resistant than are equines and homo sapiens. Because of the low degree of risk involved, tetanus vaccine simply isn't justified for family pets.

DEAR DR. MILLAR.: Taffy, my guinea pig, is five-months-old now. She has never outgrown this habit which bothers me. Whenever I hold her she always seems to wet on me. It doesn't bother her. How can I stop her from doing this? — C.M.

DEAR C.M.: The surest solution is to cuddle her in your hands but don't pick her up. With time you might be able to hold her again and still remain dry. With careful and patient handling she might gain increased confidence in you and be less frightened. A little more age might also strengthen her bladder muscle making accidental "leakage" less likely.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our puppy has a spot or two of the old mange, the demodectic kind. What about old Tom cat. Can he pick it up? He's so battle-scarred it would be hard to tell if he did. He and the pup don't get along, so far. — S.T.

DEAR S.T.: Demodectic mange (the most serious type in dogs) is comparatively uncommon in cats in the first place. Since adult animals, in either species, are highly resistant to this mange and intimate contact is required for transmission, the odds of Tom turning up with demodectic mange are astronomically small.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Do dogs get hangovers? If they do, what's the best cure? — U.G.

DEAR U.G.: Rarely, and then only with human "help." A hungover hound would tend to drink more fluids to correct the dehydration which is a major morning-after problem. A headache? Yes, a dog could have one too. Half of an aspirin for an average-sized dog — if the stomach could handle it — might help.

Tremors or the shakes? Actually, more alcohol does relieve this condition temporarily, but it is definitely not an indicated cure. Coffee for canines? No help. Few canines drink the stuff anyway. Fortunately, few canines drink alcoholic beverages to begin with and, obviously, none do without at least cooperation if not downright coercion. People who don't want to drink alone shouldn't seek out a canine companion to keep up with them. This is one people pastime (pleasurable or painful as the case may be) which shouldn't be inflicted on family pets.

Cosy Slippers From Squares

By MAY E. Mac LEAN

Every mail brings interesting letters from readers and I only wish I had the time to reply to each of them. The most I can do is a short note of a sentence or two, and make the rest the subject of upcoming columns.

One lady wrote that she had seen slippers made of granny-squares, but had forgotten how they were assembled into slippers and could I make any suggestions.

While I do not have this exact pattern, I can give you some guidance on how to go about making them. Granny-squares can be any size depending on the wool and hook being used.

Let's say your granny square is three inches square. If you make nine and assemble them three across and three down, you will have a nine inch square. From this it is very easy to fashion a slipper.

Fold the square in half so that you have a triangle and sew along one edge which will be along the sole of the foot. Continue halfway along the other edge to form the back of the heel, the fold of the triangle will go over the instep of the foot. Fold down the point onto the instep part and catch neatly.

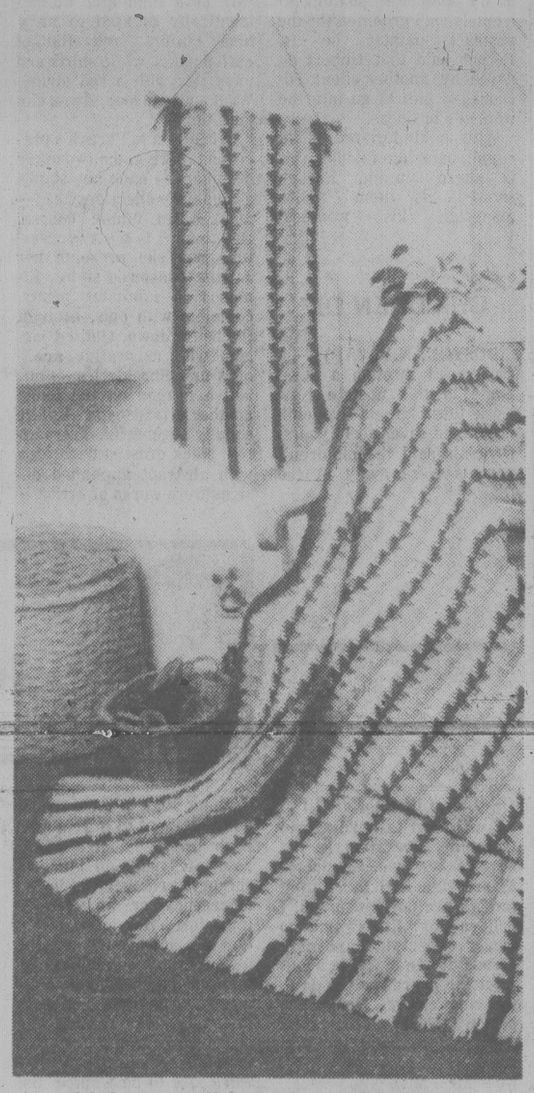
If you take a square of paper and follow the instructions you will see how easy it is to make. Of course you do not need to have the granny-squares, you can make the slippers with just a plain nine inch square of knitting. Be sure to choose a pattern though which has the appearance of being the same from both sides.

The nine inch square is for the largest size, for a medium size make an eight inch square and for a children's size a seven inch square. If you are using the granny square idea, it may be necessary to adjust the pattern (by leaving the last round off) or the crochet hook size, in order to fit the squares into the overall seven, eight or nine inch squares, but this will not be at all difficult to do.

The crochet granny square pattern is on Leaflet No. 7193 where it has been featured as shorts, the price of this leaflet is 75 cents. I do have a knitted granny-square pattern in mimiograph form, this is 50 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope.

This week's pattern is an afghan and wall hanging for your family room, den or studio. Crocheted with a knitting worsted weight of yarn or sayelle, choose four blending tones of one color for a pleasing effect.

To order Leaflet No. 0778, send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self addressed return envelope. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, "KNIT & CHAT", c/o 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Quebec.



Afghan, wall hanging add color

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers of my series are available, price 75 cents. Gift & Bazaar Catalogue, 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope.

New Styles Tried Out At Paris Fashion Show

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

PARIS — Alix Gres brought the fall couture showings to an amiable conclusion in her traditional way. It was particularly appropriate for the quintessential couturiere to have the last work at a time when the couture is struggling to be born again.

She was preceded by three upstarts who would like to become tomorrow's establishment designers. At the moment, they are pursuing independent paths, as Mme. Gres did back in the 1930s when she invented new ways to handle jersey. Gilbert Feruch's forte is tailored suits. He started out in 1950 tailoring them for the likes of Adolphe Menjou and William Powell. This is his first collection for women. One of his long-time fans, Tal Coat, sat in the audience looking extremely well groomed for the abstract painter he is. Feruch said that Hubert de Givenchy, another client, encouraged him to go into the women's business.

With main-tailored suits edging back into fashion, this is sharp timing. Feruch showed his mens' styles alongside his womens' things. Generally speaking, the mens' jackets are looser than the womens' styles. They taper from broad shoulders and deep armholes to fit snugly at the hips. Pretty adventurous for mens' tailoring.

Other deviations from the norm are collarless suit jackets with fly-front closings and jackets that match the overcoat, not the pants they are worn with.

The womens' suits are conventionally tailored, with skirt or pants, and are beautifully fitted. It's a treat to see womens' clothes as carefully tailored as the best mens' suits.

The dresses are not nearly as successful. Feruch needs more practice with soft fabrics.

One of the most successful moments in the Paris shows was the parade down the runway of a man and woman identically dressed in navy blue blazers, red flannel cuffed pants, white shirts and navy ties with a red stripe. What a way to look, if you can pull it off.

In contrast to Feruch's precision tailoring, the two other designers — each has shown a couple of collections here — pursues an ethnic course. Hanae Mori is most successful when she presents her Japanese-inspired styles. Kimonos in luminous prints, complete with obis, brought the house down. Quilted jackets with decorative appliques or embroideries — one had a dragon on the back, another a landscape — were equally successful. Two narrow black dresses decorated with abstract appliqued designs were works of art.

DR. L. L. COLEMAN

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I will need to have a hysterectomy operation in the next year or two. My doctor assures me that the fibroid tumors are not cancerous. I believe him. I'm 46 and no longer expect to have children. But live in terror about what the operation wil do to me emotionally. What's the best way to prepare myself for this problem? — Mrs. J.M.

Dear Mrs. M.:

You have stated so well the expressed and unexpressed thoughts that so many readers feel about hysterectomy. High levels of anxiety are associated with all kinds of surgery, whether it is an emergency or an elective procedure. But special factors are involved when the uterus, which symbolizes feminity, is surgically removed. The change in self-image in some women can become precarious. Too often they falsely believe that they will cease to be wanted and loved when their feminine identity is threatened. The capacity of a woman to cope with the problem facing you depends on many factors. Her social, intellectual, scholastic and emotional background affects her ability to face such image-threatening surgery.

It is absolutely essential that all women, concerned as you are, should openly express their anxiety to their doctor or to their surgeon. From them they would gain great emotional support and assurance that a hysterectomy operation need not change their outlook on life nor affect their personal happiness.

Dear Mrs. B.:

Large adenoids, allergy, sinus infection, a deviated nasal septum or crusting of the nose due to inflammation and infection can all be responsible. Of all these causes, adenoids are probably the most common offender. It is simple to pinpoint the cause by examination.

Corn syrup is a sweet, clear liquid derived from corn. It should not be substituted for sugar in recipes, but can be used as a sweetener in coffee or tea, or as a glaze for meats, fruits and vegetables. Even after the bottle has been opened, corn syrup can be stored on the cupboard shelf, provided the cap is tightly closed.

The 12-page folder Cooking With Corn Syrup offers a few useful tips for the use of corn syrup as well as some mouthwatering recipes.

For instance, measure corn syrup in an oiled measuring cup so that it will pour out easily. However, do not use this method when you want to add the syrup to beaten egg whites.

Recipes include Chinese Dry Garlic Chicken Wings, Pork Chops with Orange Sauce, Korean-Style Steak, Deluxe Pecan Pie and Praline Ice Cream. Corn syrup makes ice cream smooth and creamy and prevents the formation of ice crystals.

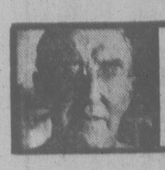
Jack Frost's Around With His Little Brush



GARDENING
jack beastall

Experienced local gardeners are expecting frost to invade low lying areas any night. They have covers ready for tomatoes and squash plants, and any other tender vegetables which are still cropping well.

The frosts they are expecting are classed as "ground frosts" which are the result of rapid loss of heat from the soil when a clear night sky follows a sunny day.

This type of frost is not recorded on a thermometer attached to a window frame some 10 feet above soil level. It is recorded on a "grass minimum" thermometer mounted on a metal holder in a horizontal position two inches above a surface of mown grass.

There is a reason for this two-inch height. If the thermometer were lying on the grass it would record the surface temperature of the soil which would be much warmer than the air temperature.

Rapid escape of heat from a warmed surface causes a sharp drop in temperature, and the greatest drop is at a point approximately two inches from the warmed surface.

When a thermometer is used that records the temperature on a graph, we find a pronounced drop across sunset, a temperature rise from two hours after sunset until around 2 a.m., then a steady drop to the lowest point for the night which is across the hour of sunrise.

The home gardener is not interested in the air temperature outside the kitchen window, knowing its readings are influenced by heat leaking through the glass and the frame, and the residual heat of the wall to which the thermometer is attached. The gardener is concerned with the lowest temperature where his plants are located, and that is just above soil level.

The first reports of frost come from gardeners in low-lying areas. This is because warm air rises and cold air sinks to the lowest possible level.

Cold air flows downhill into a hollow where it sometimes accumulates to a depth sufficient to give not only a ground frost but an air frost at the four foot level, the standard height of thermometers that record the air temperature.

Any solid object situated on sloping ground which impedes the downward flow of the cold air will create a frost pocket on its high side as the air builds against it. For this reason gardeners are careful not to build solid fences along property lines on sloping ground.

Open fences, especially wire fences, allow almost free passage of cold air into, and out of the property, thus lessening the effect of frost.

When plants are used to mark boundary lines of sloping gardens they should not form a tight hedge, but be planted so that some air drainage at soil level is possible.

Frost is evident on clear nights when the air is still; a light breeze keeps the air mixed and lessens the chance of warm air rising and cooler air sinking. From this observation came the mechanically operated propellors used to protect orchards and plantings of tender crops.

While light night breezes are often noted on high ground, there is little air movement in a sheltered hollow, which is another reason for early fall and late spring frosts on low ground.

It takes very little air turbulence, as it is called, to raise the temperature a few degrees, just the few degrees necessary to avoid plant damage.

Even a one-inch mesh chicken wire fence can cause enough turbulance, as the air currents bend to pass the wires and collide on the other side, to raise the temperature at a point one inch beyond the wire on the lower side about one-half to one degree Celsius. Yet the amount of wire present can be less than 10 per cent the area of the fence.

A few conifer boughs pressed upright into the soil around a plant will filter a cold frosty winter wind and cause sufficient turbulance to raise the air temperature around the plant itself by several degrees, often enough to prevent damage. At the same time the plant is not weakened as it would be if wrapped in a smothering cover.

Any baffle placed between the soil and the clear night sky will lessen the rate of heat loss from the soil and prevent frost damage to the plants beneath. The effect is the same as produced by a cloud cover. Trees form such a baffle therefore frost is always less in a treed garden.

In a book written some 150 years ago, a renowned gardener named Loudon reported that a cambric handkerchief spread on stakes six inches above the grass retarded heat loss sufficiently to give an 8 degree F. difference on two identical thermometers, one under the handkerchief, the other alongside in the open.

Smoke smudges used in citrus groves and fruit orchards have the same effect as a cloud layer. Sacking or lengths of burlap raised on stakes will have the same effect on level ground, but the effect is less on sloping ground because the down flow of air passes under the baffle.

Few gardens are perfectly level from one side to the other. The surface usually has low spots and high spots although the difference may be only a matter of inches.

Cold air sinks into these low spots making a micro-climate cooler than on higher spots.

This is important to the gardener who delights in growing plants known to be on the borderline of cold winter hardiness. He is careful to select the higher spots for his most tender plants, otherwise he experiences damage to one while another of the same kind will be undamaged although only a few feet away.

Each garden has its own micro-climates which are different to any adjoining garden. It is often the reason a plant fails in one garden but thrives in the garden next door.

The micro-climate of a garden is determined by the lay of the land, the hours of exposure to sunlight, exposure to prevailing winds, solid obstructions, permeable obstructions, air drainage and heat traps.

To know the micro-climate of the garden is essential to success with the plants, and only a person who has lived with the garden for several years can gather the needed information.

Most of it will be gained by observation. Birds seek spots sheltered from wind; snakes sun themselves in early spring in the warm spots, and the family cat will do the same during winter. Spiders spin their webs where air currents bring a banquet of flying insects.

The growth of common native plants (burdock, chickweed, grasses) will be much earlier in well-drained warm patches than in poorly drained spots or more open to the elements.

The home gardener can change the micro-climates to suit the plants being grown. He can also change them unintentionally and to the detriment of the plants. Each addition to the garden, or removal from the garden, has a definite effect on the over-all micro-climate.

WORK FOR WEEK

In some gardens, dahlia foliage and flowers will have been spoiled by near zero temperatures in early morning. Tubers of these may be lifted for winter storage.

Weed rock garden by hand to avoid disturbing roots of wanted plants. Remove leaves from low-growing and flat plants or the leaves will rot away sections of foliage during winter as they decompose.

Among them are parsnips, leeks, Jerusalem artichokes (the tuberous rooted kind), and the yellow turnip or rutabaga.

Also leafy vegetables such as kale, swiss chard, winter cabbage, savoy cabbage, curly endive, and late brussels sprouts. Chinese or winter radishes are at their best during November.

If raising the Flower of Spring cabbage from seed, the young seedling plants should go into their growing spaces now. Choose a sunny but protected spot so they get every chance to grow.

Begin collecting fallen leaves for making leafmould or to mix into the general compost heap.

Watermelon Legs

TOKYO (Reuter) — He looks like a watermelon on legs. He's got a head like a washtub. His shoulders, rippling and corded with muscle, belong on a draft horse.

Naked except for a blood-red loincloth, his powerful buttocks are elephantine. He is so strong he can slap down a good-sized tree — and has been photographed doing it.

He is Takamiyama (Tall-Looking Mountain), the biggest, one of the best, and certainly the most popular Sumo wrestler in Japan.

He stands six foot, four inches and weighs a gargantuan 416 pounds. Perhaps, just an ounce of it is fat.

The rest is solid, iron-hard muscle.

Down the room another wrestler, 322-pound Kurohimeyama (Black Princess Mountain) grunts as he warms up by slamming his piledriver hands into a tree-sized beam with a repetitive thud.

And in the corner the boy wonder of Sumgrand champion (one of three) Kitandumi (Northern Lakes), stares at the wall as he prepares his 372-pound frame for the fray.

Trainee Sumo wrestlers attend to the gigantic champions and talk to the Sumo groupies standing in the rain in the alley outside the dressing room.

Some foreigners may view the ungentle giants as freaks but in Japan, where Sumo is the national sport, they are highly respected members of the community.

Most of the Sumotori come from farm or fishing villages in the north of Japan (especially Hokkaido Island).

Masuiyama, a relative lightweight at 247 pounds, is a singer and painter while Jessie is famous as an after-dinner speaker and — although it may be hard to believe given his bulk — as a soft-shoe dancer.

Sumo, which traces its origins back more than 2,000 years, is more than just a sport.

Favors For Sask. Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Transport Minister Otto Lang, also responsible for the Canadian wheat board, denied that Alberta farmers may be victims of a political plot favoring Saskatchewan grain producers.

Commenting on statements made Thursday by Marv Moore, Alberta agriculture minister, Lang said decisions about quotas and grain movements are made by the wheat board "without any interference from me whatsoever."

He said speculation by Moore about political advantages enjoyed by Saskatchewan farmers is "completely off base."

Ignoring MD Advice Hastens the Grave

LONDON (Reuter) — Nearly 40 per cent of patients under the age of 50 who died in hospitals contributed to their own deaths by over-eating, drinking, smoking or ignoring their doctors' orders, says a published study.

The finding will come as no surprise to physicians, wrote Sir Cyril Clarke, director of the Royal College of Physicians' medical services study group, which conducted the survey.

"Doctors have been saying for years that the causes of many of the killing diseases of middle life are not mysteries, but are contributed to by over-eating, excess alcohol and tobacco," he wrote in the British Medical Journal.

Of 250 patients studied, 98 cases of "self-destruction" were found.

Eight died of deliberate self-poisoning and six died of alcoholic cirrhosis of the liver.

Thirteen patients who died of cancers of the throat and lungs "were strongly addicted to cigarettes, some smoking as many as 60 a day."

Of those dying of heart attacks, 25 had one or more causal factors within their own control — 12 were grossly overweight and 22 smoked large numbers of cigarettes.

Three heart attack victims had had symptoms long before consulting their doctor.

Thirty-seven of the 98 did not follow the orders of doctors or hospital staff.

"These attitudes were often encouraged by their spouses," the study said.

Sir Cyril concluded by quoting statistics to show that heart disease rates are falling among the professional classes but rising in others, indicating that better-educated people heed medical and health advice while others do not.

The "deaths under 50" project was begun to improve medical care but also to discover what factors lay behind the simple "cause of death" listed on death certificates.

Indian Taxation Powers Appealed

OLYMPIA (AP) — Washington state Friday appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court the decision of a three-judge federal court which held Indian tribes have taxing powers over non-Indians on reservations.

In February, the three-judge panel, sitting in Spokane, held that Indian reservation taxation of cigarettes pre-empted the state's tobacco taxes, even in sales to non-Indians.

The court, in its 2-to-1 decision, also invalidated the state's motor vehicle excise tax and camper tax on vehicles owned by reservation residents, even if they are driven off the reservation on occasion.

The request for U.S. Supreme Court review says the decision effectively invalidates a Montana case in which the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the right of states to impose tobacco and certain other taxes on non-Indians on reservations.

Other issues include whether the state can impose auditing requirements on Indian reservations designed to insure taxes on non-Indians are properly collected and whether taxes can apply to Indians living on reservations where they are not tribal members.

WEED STUDY SLATED

The federal government will spend nearly $1 million for research into the herbicide 2,4-D and alternative methods for aquatic weed control, federal Environment Minister Len Marchand says.

Marchand said in a letter to Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe that the $965,000 project will include a review of all available information on 2,4-D and an assessment of the benefits and risks involved.

Blencoe had written to Marchand asking the federal government to impose a national moratorium on phenoxy herbicide use and to adopt monitoring recommendations made by the National Research Council.

Marchand said the safety of pesticides is ensured through a sophisticated preregistration review process.

Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said in response to a letter from Blencoe that 2,4-D is the most important agricultural herbicide in Canada.

"I feel you and your colleagues in council need not be concerned about the safety of using 2,4-D consistent with use patterns acceptable for registration under the authority of the Pest Control Products Act," Whelan said.

Hard Evidence Aside, Has Lots to Classify

LONDON (Reuter) — "Considering the many sightings of sea serpents, the amount of solid evidence is disappointing," admits the author of a new book on this popular phenomenon.

But lack of solid evidence does not stop Graham McEwan from arguing strongly in favor of the beasts' existence, and even listing some nine classifications based on the nearly 400 "apparently genuine reports."

"These reports are trustworthy, not merely because of the obvious good faith and reliability of the witnesses, but because of the consistency of their descriptions, the same details appearing year after year, century after century," he says in the opening of Sea Serpents, Sailors and Skeptics, published by Routledge and Kegan Paul, London.

Writing such a book might open McEwan to the charge of joining the para-scientific parade of authors cashing in on error-ridden tales of prehistoric astronauts, undersea continents and ship-eating wastes of ocen.

But the painstaking lists of sightings and quotes from local newspapers in McEwan's book reveal a man wrapped up in a hobby, willing to expose hoaxes and mistakes.

For instance, he explains how basking sharks, which can reach 12 metres in length, can decompose after death until their body resembles the prehistoric beast plesiosaur. He lists other natural phenomena that have been mistaken for monsters.

But what of the sea serpent McEwan classifies as "the long-necked seal," which he calculates has been reliably sighted on 94 occasions?

It has a fat, round body with pairs of flippers at both ends, a long, flexible neck and a dog-like head with tw fleshy protuberances resembling horns. It can swim at speeds up to 35 knots and its length varies from nine to 21 metres.

"It is found all over the world except in polar seas, and the correlation between sightings and climate indicates that it likes warm but not hot regions."

Next most often seen beast is the "waterhorse" with 71 sightings. It has a horse-like face, a hairy mane on its stout neck and two pairs of flippers, swims in vertical undulations and reaches lengths of 12 to 30 metres. (The largest whales are about 30 metres long.)

Other classifications include the multi-humped, the multi-finned, the Scandinavian giant otter, the giant eel and even something called the giant tadpole, only glimpsed five times.

The most bizarre is perhaps the sea-going crocodile. McEwan quotes the account of a German submarine commander who saw a 20-metre specimen blown out of the water during the Second World War when a torpedoed British merchant ship exploded.

To back up his arguments that the sea has yet to reveal all its mysteries McEwan cites the capture in 1939 of a live coelacanth, a fish which was thought to have become extinct 70 million years ago.

The author, who has no scientific qualifications, also recounts the history of the giant squid, regarded by most scientists as a figment of sailors' imagination until as late as the second half of the 19th century.

A skeptic will not finish Sea Serpents, Sailors and Skeptics convinced of the existence of the waterhorse, but he may be persuaded that a lot of people believe they have seen a lot of sea monsters.

Who's In Charge? No-One and Everyone!

BOSTON (AP) — Television is an industry known for dropping executives as quickly as it cancels new shows. If these corporate heads do not control their fate, who does?

"The answer is nobody and everybody," NBC-TV President Robert Mulholland told a meeting of the Boston-New England Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

Mulholland and three other television network presidents addressed the topic Television: Who's in Charge.

Among the factors cited as playing an important role in television programming are ratings, advertisers, the government and public pressure groups. Public Broadcasting Service President Lawrence Grossman was alone in listing greed as a dominant force.

Television has been criticized for relying too heavily on numbers, primarily the numbers as told by the Nielsen ratings.

"Ratings reflect, they don't select," he said.

The commercial television executives agreed that there are some types of input about which they are not too pleased—U.S. government regulation and citizens' interest groups.

Bastion Raffles Doll's House

Fantasia is the name of a spectacular doll's house that is to be raffled during the next few weeks with proceeds being shared by the United Way campaign and Bastion Theatre, a non-profit organization.

The Bastion Theatre women's committee has been busy for a year creating Fantasia from a design by Charlotte Swegles. The house was built by her husband, Richard, with assistance from the committee. It contains 12 rooms completely furnished, all decor and appointments being perfect replicas of Victorian antiques.

Everything inside the three-foot high mansion actually works; doors and cupboards open, chandeliers and lamps turn off and on. Tiny magazines are microfilmed from originals, books are leather-bound and the hooked rugs are true to the design of the period. Each tiny roof shingle is handmade and individually applied. Even the miniature grandfather clock keeps time.

Fantasia will be on display until Oct. 22 at the Hillside Mall, from Oct. 23 to Nov. 2 at Mayfair Mall and at McPherson Playhouse during the run of Bastion Theatre's next presentation, the comedy, Otherwise Engaged, Nov. 3-18. Tickets may be purchased wherever the house is on display.

Amity Choir Directed By Jon Washburn

Ballroom Concert Opens Amity Season

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Music lovers in Victoria, have you taken a look around lately and realized what a lot of good things not only come our way, but are rooted here and making strong headway?

Recognition at a national level is developing rapidly for, among other things, the University of Victoria music faculty, the Conservatory and the summer season's International Festival.

And then there's Amity Singers, which began so modestly a number of years ago as a sort of spin-off from a Victoria College student chorus. The idea of Amity grew through several chrysalis stages until it emerged as a chamber choir of under 30 voices, professionally directed and aspiring to the highest possible performance standard.

Since the formative years under the direction of Rodney Webster, Amity has been conducted by George Corwin, Timothy Vernon and currently by Jon Washburn, who is also conductor of the renowned Vancouver Chamber Choir and director of choral activity at Vancouver Community College.

Amity Singers is now a 26-voice ensemble, 15 members of which have been placed on a professional basis, receiving remuneration. The direction the choir is bent toward is an increase next season to a professional core of 20 and ultimately, full professionalism.

Impressed with the fine quality of the ensemble's performance, together with the fact that research has disclosed that Amity has the largest subscriber list of any chamber choir in Canada (over 400 last season, with an average attendance per concert of 900), Canada Council has awarded the group a major grant increase to $3,500, making Amity's grant one of the largest awarded to a non-professional choir in the country.

On Oct. 25 and 26, Amity will open its 1978-79 season with a "Songs by Candlelight" concert in the Empress Hotel ballroom. This glamorous event with its Viennese atmosphere — the audience is clustered around numerous small tables sipping refreshment while the chorus sings — has been an enthusiastically received highlight of the past two seasons.

On this occasion the lovely vocal sound of the choir will be complemented by the delicate beauty of the guitar as played by guest artist Denis Olsen. In his contribution will be found English lute and Spanish music to match the Elizabethan madrigals, the gypsy songs and Negro spirituals of the choir.

The second event in the Amity year will occur at Christmas when music celebrating the season will be performed by the choir with organ and string quintet. The program will also include a traditional carol sing-along. Amity's Christmas will take place at Christ Church Cathedral.

The Mozart Vespers and the Cantata No. 140 by Bach will be performed in April, again in the Cathedral with the Canadian lyric soprano Ingrid Suderman as guest. Amity is also to fill the guest artist spot with Victoria Symphony in February.

Season subscriptions can be purchased for $13 up to Oct. 25. The tickets are available through Modern Sound Records, 766 Fort, or the Tudor Sweet Shoppe, 2228 Oak Bay. Parties of four or six can reserve tables for the Empress candlelight concert. Information is available at 1109 Langley or by phoning 477-7759 or 385-2788.

'Conductor Must Be a Challenger'

A combination of factors contributes to the quality of a symphony orchestra performance, but the actual key to a good performance is the conductor's rehearsal technique, says Victoria Symphony guest conductor Jose Serebrier.

At 40, home-based in New York, Serebrier guest conducts major orchestras around the world. He prefers that situation to being committed for whole seasons to one, or even two orchestras.

"But that could change at any time," he says, his face lighting up with an engagingly impish grin. He contracted to come to Victoria as guest conductor virtually a year ago and was somewhat surprised to find himself a part of the "Season of the Maestros" in the Symphony's search for a conductor to fill the vacant resident post.

"However I'm not going to say I wouldn't consider it if it was offered to me," he says. "I love what I've seen of this city and the orchestra has very high potential."

Serebrier will conduct the concerts Sunday and Monday at the University Music Centre concert hall. His program will consist of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, the Sibelius Violin Concerto with Daniel Heifetz as soloist, Kodaly's Dances of Galanta and the first performance in Canada of Canadian composer Syd Hodkinson's Stabile.

Born in Montevideo, Uruguay, of Russian and Polish parents, Serebrier's story is one of musical precocity, early ambition and splendid realization of a youthful goal.He began the study of violin at the age of nine and made his conducting debut at 11.

"I knew from the beginning that I wanted to be a conductor," he says.

He was 23 when Leopold Stokowski named him one of his associate conductors with the newly formed American Symphony Orchestra in New York, a post he held for four years. Prior to that he had been the Minneapolis Symphony's apprentice conductor with Antal Dorati for two seasons in addition to studying with Piere Monteux.

Stokowski would not actually teach his associates, Serebrier says, "but nevertheless I learned an enormous amount in the four years I was with him and rehearsal technique was a major part of it.

"In performance Stokowski was a master showman, but in rehearsal he was a businessman — organized, precise, economical with words and energy, but a perfectionist."

When young Jose Serebrier asked him for advice on continuing to learn the conductor's art, Stokowski told him to "go around the world and listen to all the bad conductors. You will learn more that way than by listening to only good conductors."

SEREBRIER . . . 'listen to bad ones first'

Serebrier found this to be as true as the fact that one learns far more from one's own failures than from successes.

A cardinal rule in rehearsal, Maestro Serebrier stresses, is not to waste time by talking too much; an orchestra quickly becomes bored with a conductor who indulges in long explanatory speeches. But you can also drain its energies by working it too hard without supplying new viewpoints and ideas.

The conductor must be a challenger — a refresher of the orchestra's energies. And he must respect his musicians. "Give them credit for the ability to correct certain things themselves," he says. "In an initial run-through there are always a few unsatisfactory episodes that will subsequently be adjusted without the conductor having to waste time stopping to go over the passages."

In New York Serebrier regularly conducts the Juilliard Orchestra, which is all graduates, and also the American Symphony Orchestra. He saves some time every year for the London Philharmonic, with which he has made many recordings, and conducts regularly in Warsaw, his native city of Montevideo and Salvador.

There is more, Serebrier is also a composer of note. In fact it was composition that first brought him to the attention of Stokowski.

It happened in 1957 when Stokowski was conducting the Houston Symphony and had planned to premiere the difficult and complex Symphony No.4 by the American composer Charles Ives. But the music was not ready and in searching for a new interesting work to take its place the maestro discovered and chose to perform the Symphony No.1, written by Serebrier, then a 17-year-old Curtis Institute student who had recently arrived in the United States.

The Ives Symphony finally had its premiere in 1965 with Stokowski conducting and Serebrier beside him on the podium as one of the three conductors necessary for the rhythmic complexities of the work.

Crowning that incident is the fact that Serebrier conducted the Ives Symphony when it was recorded by RCA to commemorate the composer's birth centenary. That record won the Grammy Award in America, the Grand Prix du Disque in Paris, the Record of the Year Award in Argentina, was a best-seller in Japan and subsequently came out in a quadraphonic version.

The list of Serebrier's compositions, published, performed and recorded is considerable. A large Partita written for his M.A. degree at the University of Minnesota, and played by the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington under the composer's baton, was later recorded by the Louisville Orchestra. The record was reviewed for High Fidelity Magazine by Alfred Frankenstein, who called Serebrier the "logical successor to the crown of Villa-Lobos and the South American to watch."

Serebrier's first love is still conducting. "I don't take my compositions seriously," he says. "No, I'm not putting them down, but conducting is my primary interest. What is important to me about being a composer is that it is of great assistance to me as a performer — in interpreting other people's work, because I look at the music, as it were, from the inside."

Much as he loves to conduct around the world — Brussels and Paris in January, Australia and Manila in April among other places in the year ahead — Serebrier says that, wherever he goes, for the present he will be keeping one foot in New York because soprano Carole Farley, who is his wife, is a member of the Metropolitan Opera company, though equally in demand on the other side of the Atlantic.

When Maestro Serebrier leaves Victoria it will be to take the San Antonio (Texas) Symphony on a tour of Mexico, its first international venture. In February he will be conducting the New Orleans Symphony on a tour of the Caribbean and, in May, the American Composers' Orchestra on a first tour of all major American east coast cities. In June he will be taking the Juilliard Orchestra to South America. He will also be conducting in Warsaw, a concert that will later be aired in the U.S. by PBS.

In the summers he returns to the Cleveland orchestra where, at the invitation of its famous conductor George Szell, he spent two seasons in the late sixties as composer-in-residence.

It sounds very much as though his cup runneth over — there is also a current commitment to record all the Tchaikowsky symphonies for RCA — but Serebrier says he is alway prepared to take up a challenge; that he continually seeks room for growth.

Is it possible that Victoria could offer him his kind of challenge? It is certain that he himself constitutes a challenge to the orchestra he conducts this weekend, and little doubt that he — and we — will be rewarded with a considerable response.

Young Violinist Symphony Soloist

The young guest artist appearing this weekend with guest conductor Jose Serebrier and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, violinist Daniel Heifetz (no relation to Jascha Heifetz), was one of three American violin prizewinners in the Sixth International Tchaikowsky Competition held in Moscow in July.

His performance so greatly impressed the public and press that Heifetz was the recipient of an official invitation to tour the Soviet Union. More recently he has given a New York recital at Lincoln Centre and appeared in concert with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and with the Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia, Washington, and Baltimore.

He has also made recital appearances in Europe, Central and South America and in tours of North America.

On Sunday and Monday at the University Centre concert hall, Heifetz will be performing the Sibelius Violin Concerto.

Duo Pianists to Open New Musical Art Season

Victoria Musical Art Society begins its new season Sunday, Oct. 22 at McPherson Playhouse. For the occasion the society is presenting the best loved professional classical music team on Vancouver Island — duo pianists Robin Wood and his wife, Winifred Scott.

This duo is, in fact, noted over a wide area through intermittent tours for its perfect balance, brilliance and mutuality of expression in performance. Their program for the Musical Art concert consists of sonatas by Donizetti, Dussek and Mozart, and the Liebeslieder Waltzes of Brahms.

As part of the celebration of the recent opening of the University of Victoria concert hall and new music wing, Robin Wood was one of three persons honored with the conferring of a Doctor of Laws degree at a special convocation, the other two being world-renowned Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester and director-emeritus of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Colin Graham.

In the citation that accompanied the conferring of the honorary degree, reference was made to Dr. Wood's scholarship entrance into the Royal Academy of Music in London, England in 1946 and his subsequent winning of all major piano awards, his study in Paris and Lucerne and following full professional career in Britain and Europe.

"Robin holds a special place in the affections of this city because of his decision, in the prime of his career, to share his gifts with the community in which he was born and raised," said the citation.

"In 1965 (he) accepted the challenge of returning to Victoria to become principal of the recently formed Victoria School of Music, which would in 1968 become affiliated with this University as the Victoria Conservatory of Music. Together with his wife, the noted pianist Winifred Scott, Wood has provided the vigorous leadership that has built the Conservatory into one of Canada's leading institutions of its kind. ... While achieving this enormous success in teaching, he has continued to reveal his unflagging energy and brilliance as a solo and chamber performer.

"We honor him as a distinguished alumnus, as a teaching colleague, and as a musician of unique achievement."

Opportunities to hear the artist so deservedly honored, together with his gifted wife, come rarely. Single admission and season tickets will be available in the foyer prior to the concert. A reception in the mezzanine lounge will follow.

INVITED recently to join the teaching staff of Victoria Conservatory of Music, flutist Barbara Eadie will be heard there Friday at 8 p.m. with Edward Norman, pianist, in a recital of works by Poulenc, Bach, Mozart and Handel. Assisting in the program will be Sydney Humphreys, violin, Stacey Boal, viola, James Hunter, cello, and Elizabeth Morrison Taylor, soprano. Besides teaching at Camosun College Ms. Eadie has given many recitals in the Victoria area and in New York.

Fun for Jack But Not Us

'Goin' South'
Reviewed by Lorraine Locherty

Character acting is Jack Nicholson's specialty and he uses Goin' South, a Paramount picture now playing the Counting House cinema, as a showcase for his considerable talent — but with little result.

Goin' South is a forgettable yarn about the old west that is meant to be fun but turns out to be a waste of time. Nicholson directed himself as an outlaw with a heart of gold — a slight variation of the good-hearted prostitute theme — and has a great time doing it. But his part and the roles of everyone else in the movie are cliches that, no matter how cute, become dull because their antics don't lead up to much of anything.

Nicholson, hair sticking wildly in all directions, puts lots of energy into playing a dirt-encrusted horse thief. Mary Steenburgen, in her first screen role, comes across well as the pouty but plucky lady who saves him from the gallows. John Belushi, a member of television's Saturday Night Live who recently starred in National Lampoon, is funny as a Mexican bandito posing as a sheriff's deputy.

Nicholson is sentenced to death for stealing horses in an obscure Texas town on his way to Mexico. With the noose around his neck he is saved by Steenburgen, who promises the law she will marry and make an honest citizen out of him.

But all she really wants is an unpaid worker for her non-producing gold mine. Nicholson has other ideas and the movie turns into a sort of western Taming of the Shrew. Nicholson finally gains the upper hand after binding her spread-eagled to the bedposts one day after a particularly violent brawl. The gold mine starts to produce and they spend most of the time guarding the gold against Nicholson's old gang when it comes sniffing around their battered homestead, and each other.

The cast is great, the setting earthy and realistic, but the plot is stale and falls flat several times, despite some funny scenes. Westerns are generally difficult movies to make because finding a new angle on the tired old cowboys and Indians theme is hard to do. Nicholson shows us how unglamorous, disgusting and raunchy the western U.S. was circa 1825, but his version isn't any different than the one hundreds of other movies have presented over the years.

"Paul Mazursky is a rare and exemplary kind of director and 'An Unmarried Woman' is an even rarer film. Jill Clayburgh gives the film its centrifugal force...with a multilevel performance of amazing velocity, beauty and guts."
Rex Reed, Syndicated Columnist

Margaret Peterson Retrospective

A major retrospective of the work of Victoria painter Margaret Peterson, and an important Canadian private collection of 19th century art, will open simultaneously at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss, Saturday.

The collection has been loaned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tanenbaum of Toronto and has been organized as a touring exhibition by the National Gallery of Canada. It is the largest and most representative of its kind in North America, including artists who were renowned in their time but suffered eclipse in the first half of the 20th century.

There are 71 French and English paintings and 17 French, German, Italian and Belgian sculptures in this magnificent exhibition, including some by artists once famous and now returned to favor such as Gerome, Bouguereau, Ribot, Meissonier, Alma-Tadema, Boldini and Leighton. Among other artists on view to whom public recognition came more slowly, are Bonvin, Fantin-Latour, Carriere and Albert Moore.

All the traditional genres are present — landscapes, fashion, portraits, historical paintings and romanticism, a spectrum that permits the viewer a rare opportunity to view the 19th century in its own context.

Spanning four decades of work, the Peterson exhibition will be the first major exhibit since the artist's one-woman show in 1973 at the San Francisco Art Museum. Seattle-born Margaret Peterson, who studied at Berkeley and in Paris and Italy, taught at Berkeley for 20 years before resigning rather than sign a politically-motivated "oath of allegiance." She came to Canada and for five years lived and painted at Green Point, near the mouth of the Cowichan River.

In 1963 she was one of four artists chosen to represent Canada at the Sao Paolo Biennale. Miss Peterson says her concern has always been "the imitation of the ebb and flow of rhythm everlasting in the universe".

The 80 works in this exhibition depict forms and contours of line which, while they may appear at first to be Northwest Coast Indian or Arctic or Neolithic in origin, are in fact truly cross-cultural. They appear and reappear throughout the world and throughout time, rather than being specific to any one culture. The works have been borrowed from public galleries, government collections and private collections from as far away as Prince Edward Island and Berkeley.

The Peterson exhibition was organized with the assistance of Canada Council and both it and the Tanenbaum Collection will be on view through Nov. 26.

Noted Victoria artist Maxwell Bates is the subject of an exhibition opening Tuesday at The Backroom Gallery, 2020 Oak Bay. Oils, watercolors and drawings by Bates, whose interest in the contemporary scene reflects character, modes and manners of our time, will be introduced at a preview Tuesday evening.

The exhibition will continue through Oct. 28. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

"Contemporary Realism" is the title of an exhibition of the works of B.C. artists on the themes of "beautiful British Columbia" and "historic British Columbia" which will open at the Archives Gallery in the Provincial Museum complex Monday.

The exhibition comprises about 50 paintings, the work of Loren D. Adams, Nell M. Bradshaw, Raymond Chow, Peter Ewart, Robert Genn, Jack Hambleton, Harry Heine, Daniel Izzard, Brian Johnson, Hele Kowallek, Harold L. Lyon, Jack Lee McLean and John R. Schnurrenberger. The artists will be in attendance at the opening, which will be hosted by Premier Bennett.

The Archives Gallery is open to the public, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The exhibition will remain on view through Nov.2.

'World of G & S'

The incomparable ability of D'Oyly Carte and Sadlers Wells trained performers in the tuneful-nonsensical operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan is world renowned, but the touring of full productions is no longer financially possible.

That is why the company of seven of these special artists presenting an anthology under the title The World of Gilbert and Sullivan in world tours is sowelcome. Their return to Victoria, under the sponsorship of Allen Houghton, takes place next Saturday when the company will give two performances, at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. at the University Centre concert hall.

The company's talented owners and leads are tenor Thomas Round and bass-baritone Donald Adams.The polished performances in the perfect Savoy tradition, without costumes, props or scenery, have brought them fame from the Royal Albert Hall to the Hollywood Bowl and from Lincoln Centre to the Sydney Opera House.

Mary Didn't Want Any Comparisons

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore says she chose the musical-comedy variety format for her new CBS show, Mary, because another situation comedy would suffer by comparison with her old show, "no matter what we did."

"It was so beautifully written and cast. But its time has passed. The audience doesn't seem to want to see articulate comedy anymore. I couldn't do a Laverne and Shirley."

Mary is in her dressing room between rehearsals. She says, "I'm exhausted," then adds quickly, "but happy. I'm getting what I asked for. We're trying to do a special every week and it requires long, long rehearsal periods.

"I don't think my old series would succeed now. In the last year of our show, in direct proportion to the praise, our ratings were going down and down. It was just a small segment of people who appreciated it for what it was."

Mary has a lot going for it, except perhaps its time slot of 8 p.m. Sunday. The competition is deadly. ABC's Battlestar Galactica is sure to draw off the young people. That leaves Mary to fight it out for the rest of the audience with NBC's Big Event, which presents Centennial most of the time until February.

Mary doesn't appear worried. In fact, she says she likes the slot because it follows high-rated 60 Minutes and occupies the old Ed Sullivan Show berth. "I think there's room for two hits. It's the biggest viewing night of the week."

Auditions For Opera

Next production by the Vancouver Island Opera Society is to be The Yeoman of the Guard, a Gilbert and Sullivan's work that has always been considered, closest of any of their collaborative efforts to true opera, the main difference in style being that dialogue is spoken instead of being sung in recitative passages.

Auditions for the production will take place Sunday, Oct, 22, from 2 p.m.to 8 p.m.at Craigdarroch Castle, 1050 Joan Crescent. To arrange an appointed time for audition call 385-0222 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily. Anyone interested in helping backstage should also attend the audition.

Liz Really All Choked Up

Leaning on Warner's arm, the 46-year-old actress walked into Richmond Memorial Hospital and was taken away in a wheelchair to the office of Dr. Owen Gwathmey, a specialist in thoracic and vascular ailments.

Hospital officials said she would be admitted for treatment.

Miss Taylor had been rushed to a hospital in Big Stone Gap, Va. Thursday night after she choked on a chicken bone. Reporters at the restaurant said she went to the kitchen to compliment the chef and accepted his offer to try his fried chicken.

Dr. H. T. Patel dislodged the five-centimetre chicken bone and pushed it down her esophagus into her stomach in what he described as a simple, non-surgical procedure. But while it was being performed, he said he found a pear-shaped "outpouching" of the esophagus, requiring further treatment by a specialist.

Dr. Patel said the ailment is known as Zenker's diverticulum and is a stretching of the esophagus that took place before Miss Taylor choked on the bone.

Joel Hart, administrator of the hospital in Big Stone Gap, said Miss Taylor's condition was not considered serious but treatment by a throat specialist in Richmond was advisable.

Together In Year: Ray's Bride

PETROS, Tenn. — The 31-year-old bride kissed her new husband, James Earl Ray, watched guards escort him back to his jail cell and vowed they will be together outside prison within a year.

"I know we have a lot of adversity ahead of us, but now I'm ready to face it," Anna Sandhu Ray said after she and the convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. were married Friday by a former associate of the slain civil rights leader.

"I've never had a day as happy in my life and I'm sure there will be happier days in the future," she told reporters outside the walls of Brushy Mountain penitentiary, where Ray is serving 99 years for King's slaying in Memphis 10 years ago. "I love him very much."

Rev. James Lawson, one of the founders of King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was the man who invited the civil rights leader to Memphis in 1968. He conducted the wedding in a small visitors room deep inside the isolated prison.

"Certainly Anna and James are going to overcome their adversity," Lawson said. "I'm more committed than ever to helping get James Earl Ray a new trial and convinced that one day he will walk out of this prison a free man."

Only four guests — Ray's lawyer and his associate and the bride's brother and her best friend — were present at the 30-minute ceremony and brief reception featuring a wedding cake baked by Ray's cellmate.

It was the first marriage for Ray, 50, who has spent most of his life behind bars. His bride, a free-lance artist in Knoxville, was divorced five years ago after a three-year marriage.

Hours before the ceremony, correction commissioner C. Murray Henderson ordered Warden Stonney Lane to forbid any photographs of the wedding. Reporters were kept outside the prison's gates.

Bail Set at $50,000 Vicious Goes to Jail

NEW YORK — British punk rocker Sid Vicious, his spike-like hair standing up in its usual disarray, Friday was arraigned in the stabbing death of his girlfriend, and ordered held at Rikers Island prison until his former manager can raise $50,000 bail.

The hot-tempered bass guitarist who became depressed over the breakup of the punk rock group The Sex Pistols, was silent and pale during the court proceeding Friday.

Manhattan Criminal Court Judge Martin Erdmann ordered Vicious held until Malcolm McLaren, the defunct group's former manager, could post the bail.

Assistant District Attorney Kenneth Schachter objected to the amount of bail set, saying "no amount of money can assure his attendance in the courtroom."

A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Tuesday and Shachter said the district attorney's office began presenting evidence to the grand jury Friday.

Al Haber, a member of Offender Aid and Restoration, a state-funded group that counsels prisoners, said friends of the punk rocker had told him Vicious had been on a Methadone program both in the United States and in Britain and "was taking a really high dose."

"Sid's no murderer," McLaren said before the hearing, "Sid and Nancy were so passionately in love..."

"Sid had tremendous outbursts of temper and a lot of the time he was like a bull at a gate, but I can't bring myself to believe that Sid would even contemplate doing anything like this," he added. "Under that tough exterior there was a real nice guy."

Sammy Has Nothing To Smile About

"Sammy's mouth is swollen and he's under medication," said Harrah's spokesman Carl Walquist. The singer is to fly to Los Angeles for dental care today, Walquist added.

Singer Liza Minnelli, who just completed her one-week engagement at Harrah's, was to take Davis' place for the single show.

Last Man To See Hoffa Dies

PONTIAC, Mich. — Louis Linteau, a long-time friend of missing ex-Teamsters boss James Hoffa and the last person known to have spoken to Hoffa before he vanished in July 1975, has died of a heart attack.

There were no signs of violence at the scene, Lt. Orville Johnston of the Pontiac Police Department said, and the Oakland County medical examiner's office said Linteau died of a heart attack.

However, an autopsy was ordered, Johnston said.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

PROGRESS is the roar of a big diesel and the crash and crunching of wood and memories as the old makes way for the new. This house, built at 1129 Oxford Street around the turn of century, fell to the wreckers Friday as a part of a series of changes to increase parking at a nearby grocery store.

Murder Jury Gets Time Off

A murder trial in B.C. Supreme Court will resume Monday but a jury of six men and six women is not expected to hear additional evidence until Tuesday.

Friday was the fourth day of the Crown's case against John George Auxi, 40, accused in the shooting of Gizelle Schild, 41, and Sandor Kormos, 43, in Kormos' rented room last Dec. 11.

A voir dire to determine admissibility of certain evidence presented by the Crown was begun Thursday before Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon, who will make a ruling before recalling the jury.

The accused, for a number of years a member of the Hungarian community in Victoria, was arrested following a lengthy investigation of the murders at 1242 Fort Street and has been held in custody since March 4.

Auxi is represented by Vancouver lawyer Keith Libby, and the Crown's case is being presented by Nicholas Lang, assisted by Ken Salt.

Vancouver Pressmen Vote Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pressman at Pacific Press, which prints the Sun, and Province, voted Friday 93 per cent in favor of strike action.

The 103 members of the Vancouver Printing Pressmen, Assistants and Offset Workers Union, Local 25, are the only employees so far to take a strike vote among the six unions at Pacific Press whose contracts expire Oct. 31.

The joint council of newspaper unions, representing 1,400 Pacific Press workers, has applied for government mediation.

BNA Constitution Works: Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday he feels the country's underlying constitutional law "works pretty well" the way it is.

But, he added, the 10 provincial premiers want to replace the British North America Act with a new constitution and he is prepared to go along with them.

"As far as I'm concerned, it works pretty well," Trudeau said of the country's basic law when asked by a student during a byelection campaign appearance how Canada was handicapped by its constitution.

That, however, is not the opinion of the premiers, he added. Some wanted to change the way power, say, over natural resources is divided between federal and provincial governments. Others wanted in the constitution guarantees that equalization grants would be paid poorer provinces.

"So what am I to say?" Trudeau asked rhetorically. "I don't want to talk, buster?"

3 Years Later Inflation Down 2%

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board celebrated its third anniversary today with the inflation rate in the country at 8.6 per cent, down only two points from the 10.5 per cent that was endangering the economy in 1975 when the board ws established.

Last month the inflation rate was 9.4 per cent. The aim of the controls program when it was first set in motion by the federal government was to get the double-digit inflation rate down to four per cent.

The board has failed in that objective. The government blames the failure on the unexpected rise in food and energy costs.

When then-finance minister Donald Macdonald announced the formation of the board in October, 1975, he estimated it would need a total staff of around 200. By early 1977 its staff had soared far beyond that figure to 917. Now it is in the process of being phased out and its staff still amounts to 592.

Administration of the program will not be wound up until some time next year. However the expiry date of the legislation establishing the AIB is Dec. 31, 1978. Provision for the continued existence of the board to complete its work was set out in amendments to the act passed this year.

The board's compensation branch (wages and fringe benefits are described as compensation) analyzed salaries and benefits of approximately 3.9 million employees across Canada. This required staff members to review more than 80,000 compensation plans.

As the program progressed through the third year, statistics showed that an increasing number of compensation plans called for increases within the guidelines allowed by the AIB regulations. Reviewing the cases, available for analysis, reveals that about 70 per cent contained increases within the guidelines, said the board.

The effective rate of compensation increases has been 9.31 per cent in the first year of the program, 7.07 in the second and 5.4 in the third. These figures reflected those increases which were submitted at or below guidelines and board decisions in cases above the guidelines.

While the numbers will diminish, review of compensation plans relating to the controls period will continue in 1979 because employers are required to file reports on compensation plans within guideline years which start before April 14, 1978. The board said often agreements are not reached and consequently reports are not submitted to the AIB until well after the expiry of a previous agreement.

Under the prices and profits guidelines companies are restrained on the basis of their over-all percentage net margin of profits.

UN Palestine Film May Not Materialize

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A mountain seems to have been built from a molehill over a projected United Nations publicity campaign for Palestinian rights including an embryo movie that might end up on the scrap heap if it's too biased.

The publicity campaign is supposed to come to a peak on Nov. 29, the 31st anniversary of the UN resolution partitioning Palestine.

The UN has declared that date to be observed as International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, with appropriate publicity and festivity at UN headquarters.

Published reports said the film probably would have its premiere on Nov. 29 as part of the program. A UN official familiar with the situation discounted the reports, saying it would take a minor miracle for such an early showing.

What exists now is raw footage with no final script or soundtrack and a lot of work ahead. The UN secretariat has the final say on the movie's release and might hold up public screening indefinitely if it fails to meet certain criteria for impartiality and objectivity.

In the last General Assembly, a resolution was approved instructing the UN secretariat to give "the greatest possible" publicity to the rights of the Palestinian people, including the production of a movie about those rights.

The General Assembly also approved the expenditure of $500,000 for the campaign, including $80,000 budgeted for the film.

Canada, the United States and most other Western countries voted against the resolution, but they will share in the costs of the campaign.

The Canadian government, while unhappy with the entire scheme, noted that its contributions to the UN are made without strings attached.

Costs of the publicity campaign are shared according to the UN budget assessments of each member. The U.S. pays the lion's share of the UN budget, about 25 per cent, while Canada's assessment is about three per cent.

Most of the $500,000 would go for producing and disseminating documents about the rights of Palestinians, none of which has been released yet. In the past, the UN has churned out other documents on the Palestinian situation. The PLO itself has observer status in the world body.

But overlooked in the publicity exercise is Article 100 of the UN Charter which gives the secretariat a certain amount of leeway in dealing with the campaign.

The General Assembly as a collective body can instruct the secretariat by resolution. It did that last year in calling on the secretariat to give all assistance to the committee on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people in its work and specifically in disseminating information.

The resolution called for "the greatest possible dissemination of information on the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and on the efforts of the United Nations to promote the attainment of those rights."

But Article 100 says "that in performance of their duties, the secretary-general and his staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the organization."

Also, they shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officers responsible to the organization.

The UN spokesman, drawing attention to Article 100, said that the secretariat will not take orders from any one particular country or one particular segment.

"So that means you've got a rather difficult project to achieve. If the General Assembly instructs the secretariat that a motion picture film will be produced, it has to be one that is impartial and well-balanced.

"And if those criteria are not met, who knows when such a motion picture or document will be released?"

The resolution did call for written as well as visual material. "As far as I know, none of that material has been finalized, locked up or released," the spokesman added.

Hey, What Are You Doing With Those 84¢-Dollars?

By JACQUELINE BOYLE
Canadian Press

TORONTO — What are you doing with your money? A lot of people would like to know.

With the Canadian dollar hitting record lows, the great rush in buying and selling is not occurring at rates predicted by those in the business of 'secure' commodities.

With all the investment possibilities open to them, the experts say Canadians are doing one of two things — spreading their cash through the various options or hoarding it.

Sally Gonsalves, Bank of Montreal's manager of personal deposits, says there has been an increase in account balances but not a significant one.

With interest rates reaching new highs of 7¾ per cent on personal saving accounts and up to 9¼ per cent on certificates of deposit, why aren't people taking advantage of them?

"The only hypothesis I can submit is that people see the rates rising and they are waiting for even higher rates," she says.

More popular than term deposits is the traditional buying of gold. But while merchants had steeled themselves for a rush on the precious metal, consumers with six-figure incomes have been staying away even though an ounce of gold has risen in price to about $226 from the summer price of $173.

Even Canada savings bonds, another time-honored means of security saving, are not selling as well as the federal government had expected, she says.

Mrs. Harper suggests the government may extend its Nov. 10 cut-off date for bond sales if the hoped-for last minute buyers don't appear.

However, Michael Galway, executive director of the Canadian Institute of Public Real Estate Cos., says if Canadians are hoarding their money, foreign investors are not.

While the country bemoans its failing economy, foreign investors now see an opportunity to cash in on the hope of a brighter future, he says.

Galway says the declining dollar will have benefited Canadian industry by the time it recovers the minimum 90-cent value he anticipates by spring.

One man who is not complaining is A. A. Weaver, who has stamp and coin concessions in four Toronto Simpson's stores.

Weaver says he has been doing more buying of coins and stamps than selling because people seem to want to cash in their profits.

Stamps are among the finest means of securing future finances, he says, because they generally double their selling price within five years.

For those interested in stamps, Weaver warns them to look for low mintage — anywhere up to three million printed — for a guaranteed profit.

Rare wines and even art are not advised as investment securities.

In Europe, wine brokers can cash in on their collections by selling at will. Here, however, the government liquor boards are the only legal vendors of liquor.

Kevin McConnell, of International Wines and Spirits Ltd., says the only way to use wine as an investment is to buy it, leave it and then sell it in Europe.

Hawaiian Refuge Restored

HONAUNAU BAY (CP) — This Pacific archipelago abounds with relics of the religious rites and royal trappings of ancient Hawaii. Most of the sites have crumbled into ruins since the arrival of Christianity in the 1820s but a few have been restored.

One of these is the City of Refuge at Honaunau Bay on Hawaii Island, near the spot where the British explorer Captain James Cook was killed.

In pre-Christian days, Hawaiians trod warily through a thicket of laws and taboos. Casting a shadow over one of the many minor kings, hunting or fishing on a day forbidden by the gods or any similar transgression raised the threat of divine wrath which might be reflected in floods or poor harvests.

Consequently, anyone witnessing a breach of the law had the duty of pursuing the offender and killing him.

The lawbreaker's only chance of eluding death was to reach a city of refuge, where he could be purified by priests and allowed to return to his village without reprisals. But the escape route was far from easy.

Most of the cities of refuge were on coastal bays, nearly surrounded by water, so the fugitives had to swim or get a canoe. If he was still ahead of his pursuers, he then had to scale a high wall to reach the temple.

The city of Honaunau Bay was a sacred place for some 400 years until Christianized Hawaiians destroyed it in 1829, leaving only the temple foundations and the encircling walls, 12 feet high and 17 feet thick.

In 1961, the government created the City of Refuge National Park, reconstructed the temple according to sketches and descriptions by early European visitors and carved protective gods to stand inside the enclosure. Outside the walls are the foundations of the homes of royal families of the period.

The ruins of another city of refuge are on Kauai Island near the mouth of the Maiau River, near the court of the last king of the island and his six-foot, 300-pound wife, Queen Kapule.

Today the court area is the site of the deluxe Coco Palms Hotel, Kapule's fish ponds have been enlarged into palm-fringed lagoons and the original coconut grove has been increased.

Don't Rig Election, Owen Warns S.A.

WINDHOEK, South West Africa (UPI) — British Foreign Secretary David Owen urged Namibian and South African leaders today not to "rush or rig elections" to create an independent Namibia in South West Africa.

Owen and Canadian Foreign Minister Don Jamieson made up the advance party of five Western foreign ministers, headed by U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who will start talks with South African leaders in Pretoria Monday in an effort to persuade them not to hold unilateral elections in Namibia in December.

The five ministers — France and Germany will also send their envoys — will try to convince South Africa's white minority regime to give up its own plan for Namibian independence in favor of the one endorsed by the United Nations.

Owen told reporters at the J.G. Strydom airport "No one has the right to predict the results of fair and free elections. The way to combat Marxism ... is through the ballot box.

"But don't try to rig elections, don't try to rush elections. Let's have a fair, free election with the result internationally upheld and Namibia then will have a prosperous, stable future, truly independent, a member of the United Nations," Owen said.

He said a "momentous decision" had to be made in the coming days.

A crowd of about 1,000 bystanders, mostly whites, lined the street outside the Kalahari Sands Hotel where Owen, Jamieson and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher are to hold day-long talks with political and church leaders.

Sunday the three ministers meet up in Pretoria with Vance and French deputy foreign minister Olivier Stirn to prepare for Monday's and Tuesday's talks.

The weekend will be devoted to informal and exploratory discussions — Vance in Pretoria, Owen in Windhoek — before they rendezvous and compare their notes.

CONGRESS CLAMPS ON 'ANGEL DUST'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress gave final approval Friday to a crackdown on the mind-altering drug PCP, commonly known as "angel dust."

The bill, passed by voice vote, is designed to better control piperidine, a key ingredient in the manufacture of "angel dust."

The measure requires reports on the sales of the chemical, as well as making it illegal to possess piperidine with the intent of using it to manufacture "angel dust."

The penalties for making or distributing "angel dust" are increased by the bill to 10 years in prison and-or a $25,000 fine.

Alaska Primary Void

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The results of Alaska's Aug. 22 primary for governor were thrown out on Friday and a judge ordered the state to conduct a new election.

Superior Court Judge Ralph Moody directed the state to set aside the nominations of Republican Gov. Jay Hammond and Democratic state Senator Chancy Croft, and "order a new election at the earliest practicable date."

In ordering a primary rerun, Moody said the ballot would be limited to Hammond and former gov. Walter Hickel on the Republican side and Croft and former state senator Ed Merdes on the Democratic side.

Hammond and Croft are expected to file appeals of Moody's ruling with the Alaska Supreme Court. A court spokesman said arguments might be scheduled as early as Monday.

Moody said there was no evidence that election officials failed to perform their duties "out of an intentional desire to subvert the election process." He also said there was no evidence of fraud or corruption.

However, the judge said he found "actions of malconduct, mistakes and confusing procedures" sufficient enough to change the outcome of the election.

5 Blacks Shot Down By Police

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Police said today they shot and killed five black civilians, including two women and a child, during a hunt for nationalist guerrillas in a black township just outside Rhodesia's capital.

The incident took place Friday night in Harare township, about five kilometres from downtown Salisbury, the statement said.

It said police were looking for guerrillas at a house when they opened fire and two suspected terrorists were killed. A black woman and a young African girl also died. A child suffered wounds and was taken to hospital where he died shortly after arrival.

Smith Statement Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. state department official invited Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith on Friday to make official his expressed willingness to attend an all-parties conference on Rhodesia's future if no preconditions are set.

"I hope he will say that to us," said Assistant State Secretary Richard Moose after testifying before the Senate foreign relations committee. "We've always favored an all-parties conference with no preconditions of any sort."

Smith had told senators Thursday that the United States insists on unacceptable preconditions for his attendance at a conference to guide Rhodesia's transition to black-majority rule.

Later Smith told reporters: "My only precondition is that there be no preconditions. What we have been opposed to is the conditions the Americans have been insisting on."

Smith and other members of the biracial, interim council that governs Rhodesia under the "internal settlement" of last March have been using their visit to the U.S. to present their case to the Carter administration, Congress and the news media.

Murphy, McKitka Charged

SURREY (CP) — Ed McKitka former mayor of this Vancouver suburb, was charged with 16 criminal offences late Friday after a massive two-year investigation by the RCMP's commercial crime squad.

Ed Murphy a CJOR radio talk show host and Vancouver businessman Douglas Holme were charged with conspiring to offer Environment Minister Jim Nielsen a benefit in relation to land in the provincial agricultural land reserve.

Altogether, eight people were charged with a total of 33 offences Friday.

Police said all charges of possession of stolen property against others involve jewels worth $200,000 stolen in robberies in France.

The jewels were found in a Vancouver area home in December, 1977, when the Vancouver-based commercial crime squad raided more than 100 homes and businesses, in connection with alleged land speculation and bribery.

Hundreds of documents were seized and it has taken detectives nearly a year to sift through them.

Seven of the accused have been ordered to appear in court later this month. The eighth, developer Steven McGuire, was arrested and held in RCMP cells on charges of receiving a secret commission, one count of fraud, one count of conspiracy to possess stolen property, and one count of conspiracy to commit fraud.

McKitka, Surrey's mayor for two years until defeated last November, is accused of eight counts of breach of trust while mayor, four counts of demanding a benefit while mayor, one count of deceitfully influencing a municipal official, one count of conspiracy to commit fraud, one of fraud, and one of theft of property worth more than $200.

Developer Walter Link is charged with nine offences—two counts of conspiracy to commit fraud, two of fraud, one of conspiracy to commit a breach of trust of the mayor's office in Surrey, two counts of possession of stolen property, and two counts of conspiracy to possess stolen property. His wife Patricia faces two counts of possession of stolen property.

Two others, Vancouver businessmen Dwight Erickson and Harry Presley, were charged with conspiracy to possess stolen property.

Murphy and Holme are scheduled to make their first court appearances in Richmond provincial court Oct. 25, while the others, except McGuire, are due in court Oct. 20

$1,750 Drinking Fine

What is believed to be the highest drinking-driving fine in Victoria provincial court history was levied Friday by Judge William Ostler.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court the offence took place May 2 at about 11:50 p.m. when a Colwood RCMP officer spotted Mullen's vehicle shooting across traffic coming out of McDonald's Restaurant on the Old Island Highway and speeding past the police vehicle in the opposite direction and in a turning lane.

Anthony also told the court Mullen was convicted of impaired driving Oct. 23, 1975, when he was fined $300, and convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Nov. 3, 1976, and fined $400.

Defence-lawyer Richard Isaacs said his client had been involved in drinking with high school buddies on all three occasions.

Mullen, who is employed at the Syncrude tar sands plant at Fort McMurray, was also placed on six months probation.

It's Thumbs Down on Women When Manual Jobs Concerned

MUNICH (UPI) — When it comes to blue collar work, men like to think women are clumsy. Now a Munich doctor says this theory isn't all male chauvinism — the female thumb is shorter and mostly less efficient.

Dr. Karl Juritza's findings have sparked a controversy over equal opportunity for women in technical training.

Asked to report on the possibilities of training women as fitters, mechanics and electricians, Juritza told Munich's Christian Social Union city government that women were not physically suited to such work, because — among other reasons — they have shorter tnumbs than men.

"The female body is on average 10 per cent shorter than that of the man," Juritza wrote in a five-page document on the "unchangeable differences of build and function" between men and women.

"The woman has shorter arms than the man, the thumb on the female hand is shorter, the index finger longer, and the woman has shorter legs than the man."

The Christian Socialists accepted Juritza's verdict and kept the women firmly under their longer thumbs by cancelling a $425,000 grant for 30 technical apprenticeships for women.

Their action provoked fierce criticism from the Social Democrat opposition, trade unions and women's groups.

Members of the Union of Social Democratic Women pointed their long index fingers at the Christian Socialist men, shaken by what they called "their hostility toward women and lack of interest in the employment problems of girls and women."

The women reminded Mayor Erich Kiesl in a letter of the words of his fellow Christian Socialist, Bavarian employment minister Fritz Pirkl, who advised women recently that they would benefit from a career outside an office.

Carmen Koenig, a Social Democrat candidate for the Bavarian parliament, threatened to test the "strength" of the Munich decision in a court case.

The Bavarian battle of female wits vs. manly strength is not new. Technical training for women has been a provocative issue in many West German local governments — both conservative, as in Munich, and liberal, as in the northern port of Bremen.

A clause in the 1949 constitution prescribes equal rights for men and women in West Germany, but a glance at the technical professions suggests men have blocked out women almost entirely.

Bank Rate Boost to 10.25% Seen as Gov't Desperation

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition critics greeted Friday's move by the Bank of Canada to increase the bank rate to an historical high of 10.25 per cent as a sign of government desperation to rescue the sinking dollar.

The central bank announced Friday evening after the close of stock and money markets that the bank rate, which is used as a base for chartered banks in determining their interest rates, would go up by three quarters of a per cent, its largest increase this year, effective Monday.

This was the fifth time this year the central bank has increased its rate, which stood at a post-war high of 9.5 per cent before the latest increase. The new rate of 10.25 per cent is the highest the bank has ever set since it was created in 1935.

The chartered banks normally keep their prime lending rate, which they offer only their most creditworthy customers — corporate giants such as General Motors Ltd. — about three quarters of a per cent above the bank rate.

Mortgage rates are normally one or two percentage points above the prime rate and consumer lending rates are a few percentage points higher.

"Experience has shown that increasing the bankrate only increases the cost of consumer and small business loans, escalating mortgage rates and making homes more difficult to buy," said a spokesman for the New Democratic Party.

"This is madness in economic policy. They've already tried this tactic four times this year and it obviously has had a negligible effect on the dollar. Why don't they ever learn?"

He said the increase in the bankrate would cripple the economic recovery the government badly needs. Businessmen, faced with high interest rates, will leave their money in the bank instead of investing it in expanding their plants and creating new jobs, the spokesman predicted.

Progressive Conservative MP Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton) said the bankrate increase was a poor substitute for new federal budget.

"They can't hang back and

Presenting trophy is Bob Harvey, campaign vice chairman. Howie also holds wooden sculpture presented to him by Port Hardy artist Franz Pfitzer when he arrived at the northern tip of Vancouver Island. Howie is considering another spectacular run to encourage people to give to United Way. He doesn't know yet how much his first run earned in pledges.

Postal union leaders in Quebec are predicting a long, tough strike in spite of federal threats of back-to-work legislation.

The crunch comes Monday when the Canadian Union of Postal Workers will have a mandate from members to call a national strike and the government will introduce a bill to order them back to work if they are off the job.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne threatened the back-to-work bill Friday.

The government held off the introduction of the bill until Monday to give a new negotiating effort between the union and Acting Labor Minister André Ouellet a chance to work.

While Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member CUPW, accepted the labor department's intervention he criticized the government's swift move for threatening back-to-work legislation.

Parrot met Ouellet briefly Friday afternoon and agreed to talk again Monday after consulting his union.

Hamburger Soon $2 A Pound

TORONTO (CP) — Supermarket officials say the price of imported beef and shoppers' increasing demand for cheaper cuts of beef will soon push the price of lean hamburger meat over $2 a pound.

Hamburger prices rose .9 per cent last month even though beef prices in Canada dropped 1.3 per cent, the Consumer Price Index shows. During the last year, beef prices have risen 43.7 per cent while hamburger prices have increased 53.9 per cent.

Hamburger meat is made from some cuts of Canadian cattle as well as boneless beef imported from Australia and New Zealand. This week, regular hamburger costs $1.38 a pound, compared with $1.78 for lean hamburger.

Norm Riddell, vice-president of meat operations at Loblaws Ltd., said hamburger prices will continue to rise to more than $2 a pound for lean meat by next year.

"Hams and poultry are very popular at this time of year so it will relieve some of the pressure on beef prices," he said. "It will stabilize for a while, but it will be back up after Christmas."

Ruth Jackson, a vice-president of the Consumers' Association of Canada, said the fast-food market is increasing the demand for hamburger meat.

Phone Calls Hiked

OTTAWA (CP) — Interprovincial long-distance telephone calls made through B.C. Tel will cost more — at least temporarily — beginning Sunday, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announced Friday.

The commission temporarily approved rate increases sought by B.C. Tel, Bell Canada and Canadian National Telecommunications for calls between areas served by two different telephone companies.

The areas affected are B.C. — operated by B.C. Tel, Ontario, Quebec, and the Eastern Arctic — operated by Bell and Newfoundland — operated by CNT.

In July, the federal regulatory agency granted Bell Canada, the country's largest telephone company, rate increases for monthly charges and long-distance calls within its own territory. Those increases were expected to give the company an additional $248-million in revenue next year.

Then in August, the commission decided to postpone another decision concerning applications by Bell and the other two companies to institute major inter-jurisdictional long-distance rate hikes. Instead, the CRTC launched a major inquiry into trans-Canada telephone rates and operations.

This latest decision means that long-distance rate increases begin on Sunday but final approval for the change will be subject to the outcome of that inquiry which, is not expected to be completed before late next year.

The three companies were also allowed to increase — at least temporarily — some customer dialed rates by six cents a minute and to reduce others by the same amount.

Big Tax Break For City Tourist Industry

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Qualifying Victoria hotels, motels and trailer parks will have their property assessments reduced by 10 per cent next year — creating savings of $12,000 to $16,000 for large establishments.

The announcement by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was praised by spokesmen for the hospitality industry today.

"Our property taxes were $28,000 this year. A 10 per cent reduction would save us $11,200."

Another motel owner said his taxes were $40,000 and the new policy could save $16,000 next year.

Wolfe Friday announced the property tax assessment rate will be reduced to 15 per cent from 25 per cent for qualifying businesses.

This has the effect of lowering the assessment by 40 per cent.

To qualify, a hotel, motel, trailer court or resort must either close or offer long-term accommodation for at least 150 days — five months — of the year.

Under assessment rules introduced this year, residential properties are assessed at 15 per cent of actual value while commercial properties are assessed at 25 per cent.

The minister has declared that any tourist-oriented accommodation that has a short season can declare itself, in effect, a residential property for taxation purposes if it either offers long-term accommodation or closes during the off-season.

Wolfe said the tax relief is in recognition of the short time the business operated on a daily rental basis.

The change applies to all qualifying hotels, motels, trailer parks, recreational vehicle parks, campgrounds and resorts in the province.

Only accommodation that is closed or converted to long-term rentals for at least 150 days — five months — qualifies for the 15 per cent rate.

Assessment rates in 1979 will continue to be 15 per cent of actual value for residential properties and 25 per cent for commercial establishments, other than those exempted by the new regulation.

Industrial property assessments are based on 30 per cent of actual value.

"My colleagues and I are very much aware of both the difficulties our tourist industry has experienced in recent years and the need to ensure a healthy economic environment for small business enterprises," the minister said.

Cardinals Closeted

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church prayed for guidance today and then were locked inside the Apostolic Palace to begin their second secret conclave in less than two months to choose a new pope.

The red-robed cardinals filed into the Sistine Chapel singing the Latin hymn Veni Creator (Come God Creator) that God may inspire them to choose the right man to govern the church. Until they make their choice, they will be sequestered inside the chapel area.

After filing in under the chapel's famous Michelangelo frescoes, the cardinals took their places at the long wooden tables where they will begin voting Sunday.

The prelates earlier jointly celebrated the Pro Eligendo Papa mass in St. Peter's Basilica — the liturgy for electing the pope.

A Town In Despair Over Two Little Boys Lost

HOUSTON (CP) — This northern British Columbia town was in despair today after failing late Friday to locate two five-year-old boys missing since Wednesday afternoon in dense bush country about 18 kilometres south of here.

"Everyone is feeling pretty down at this point, said RCMP Const. Dale Djos.

The boys, David Crocker and Jamie Baxter, wandered away from the Crocker home on a rural gravel link to the town, while their mothers were visiting after school.

Several hundred volunteer searchers — some of whom have come in busloads from towns many kilometres away — resumed the hunt at daybreak today.

The search has become the great social equalizer with bankers, loggers, lawyers, teachers, service station operators, housewives, high school students and truckers all tramping side-by-side over rough terrain.

Two helicopters, dispatched by Northwood Pulp Ltd. and Okanagan helicopters flew over the hilly bushland broken only by marshes.

Northwood and the other major employer in town, Houston Forest Products, shut down their operations so employees could join the search. Logging trucks stood abandoned by drivers and stores were all but empty Friday.

Scores of women from church groups and service clubs co-ordinated a "sandwich brigade" to feed hungry searchers whose numbers reached 400 Friday and are expected to be greater today.

Norm Gautron, co-ordinator for the Provincial Emergency Program, said response to the search has been overwhelming and that he had to turn down 100 people Friday because the search was already organized.

"Everybody is saying, 'It could be my kid' and 'It's the neighborly thing to do,'" said Mary Ann Ruiter, manager of the community's weekly newspaper, Houston Today.

Gautron said there were too many factors involved to predict the boys' chances of survival.

"It's hard to say," he said. "It depends whether they got wet the first night . . . if they found a tree to stay under they have a good chance."

One of the boys was dressed in a down coat and boots an the other in a heavy cardigan. Temperatures dropped below freeezing Wednesday and Thursday and there was a light snowfall mixed with rain Thursday. The weather remained cool Friday.

Dump Drugs Plan Poorly Organized

How about winning a trip to Hawaii because you've done such a highly commendable thing as gone to your doctor for a checkup?

Too far fetched? Maybe it's not. In the future, who knows what will be next?

Now I hate to be negative about a concept which deserves a fully positive reaction. But when they tried to put that concept into practice there was a giant foulup. And here I sit at my desk on Friday the 13th and already everything has gone wrong. So you'll have to excuse me.

You see, I had intended to tell you about this campaign to rid B.C. homes of unwanted prescription drugs days ago. I'm afraid, however, it wasn't all that quick off the mark.

max low

Fine idea, though.

Thought up by the B.C. College of Pharmacists and supported by the provincial ministry of health and the B.C. Medical Association, the plan is for people to take any of the unused drugs in their homes and drop them into special containers in participating drug stores (about 400 of the 500 pharmacies in the province are taking part). From there they will be taken to hospitals and destroyed in incinerators.

So far so good.

The main intention, of course, is to take as many drugs as possible out of reach of children and cut down on the number of cases of poisoning.

In 1976, the total number of deaths due to poisoning in B.C. was 345. Although a fair percentage of those involved adults and much of the drug-taking was intentional, many of those who died were children.

"Last year, we had 1,500 cases of poisoning reported to us," information pharmacist Gillian Willis of the Provincial Drug and Poison Information Centre in Vancouver told me a week ago. "But many cases are not reported, of course. We estimate this figure was well over 10,000 and one third of these involved children four years of age and under."

As well as encouraging people to throw away these drugs, the campaign is including a bottle of syrup of Ipecac, a safe preparation which induces vomitting, at $1.49 a bottle.

"In the United States they have had an annual Poison Week for some years now but this is the first time it has been held in Canada," Gillian said. "The other provinces are interested in what we're doing and they are watching us."

Let's hope they aren't watching us too closely . . .

For the whole thing was kicked off grandly at a press conference Tuesday by Health Minister Bob McClelland, who urged residents to take their unwanted drugs to their nearest pharmacy and drop them off.

Trouble was, later that same day none of the pharmacists on the Island had received the display literature nor the signs to attract customers nor the containers which were to take the drugs!

Oh well, slight slipup somewhere.

Next day, still nothing.

By Thursday, many residents had heard about the campaign on the radio and were going to their nearest pharmacies as instructed only to find a few red-faced pharmacists and still no displays or containers.

A woman who rushed into one of the large chain drug stores armed with about six or seven old drug bottles was a little perturbed to find there was nowhere to put them. The pharmacist dumped them into a bag until the proper container arrived.

"They were supposed to be coming to us via our wholesaler," Joyce Anderson manager of Town and Country Shoppers Drug Mart told me late Thursday. "The Pharmacists Society delivered them last week to the wholesalers — but not until after they'd left for their weekly deliveries to the Island."

The next delivery would normally have been Thursday but, because of the holiday Monday, it was delayed until Friday.

"I'm afraid it's poorly organized, isn't it?" ventured Joyce. "It's all a bit disappointing."

Finally, by some time on Friday, the Island pharmacists received their long-awaited containers.

But the sharpness had been taken off the edge of a two-week campaign, almost half of which had gone before it got started!

And then there was that bit from the press conference about the all-expenses-paid trip to Mexico. As an incentive, anyone dropping off unused pills or buying a bottle of Ipecac would be entitled to enter a draw that could win a trip to Mazatlan.

Now, perhaps there's something wrong with me but I feel it's rather revolting to suggest parents would need that kind of inducement to do something which might save the life of their child or themselves.

Save a Life and Win a Trip! Is that what we've come down to?

Suddenly, I feel as sick as I would if I'd taken some of those drugs no one wants . . .

Escaper Still Sought

Police today are continuing the search for an 18-year-old Regina youth who bolted from the sheriff's lockup facility in the Law Courts building Thursday.

Sheriff Bill Lee said Richard Monette kicked out an unbarred window, jumped through the opening and fled as about 10 other prisoners watched.

Monette and another 18-year-old youth, Bernard John Strating, of 2872 Glenwood, had just moments before appeared before Judge William Ostler on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

The charges stemmed from three breakins in View Royal Aug. 5 and 6 during which an estimated $7,000 worth of goods was stolen. Ostler had remanded the pair to Oct. 24.

Lee said Monette and Strating were being held in the cell block area awaiting transportation back to Wilkinson Road jail.

Victoria Benefits From Doubled Gov't Grants

The province is more than doubling grants in lieu of taxes it gives municipalities with Victoria being the single largest beneficiary of the new system.

Provincial municipalities will soon receive grants totalling $7.3 million, up from $3.1 million the year before.

The city of Victoria experiences the single largest increase with a grant exceeding $2 million compared with the $774,000 it received last year.

Mayor Mike Young said the grant is about $76,000 more than council had expected to receive from the government. The $76,000 will be surplus revenue, he said, barring no additional or unforeseen expenditures.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said under the new policy, the province and the B.C. Buildings Corp. will pay grants equivalent to full municipal and regional district levies on all qualifying properties which they own.

"They now use the same standard of assessment as that applied by the municipality in assessing other commercial and business property," he said.

"That's a 162 per cent increase," he said, noting that $2 million is 10 per cent of the total property taxes collected by the city.

It is also seven times the amount paid to the city in 1975 under the NDP government "which refused to pay its share and shows how badly the city of Victoria was treated," the Victoria MLA said.

"It is my earnest hope a large portion of this gain will be passed on to local taxpayers in the form of reduced property taxes," Bawlf added.

He said the $2 million represents $30 for every man, woman and child in the city, and will undoubtedly increase in years to come.

He says he is delighted equality for city taxpayers has been achieved. He says his number one campaign promise has finally been accomplished.

He admitted it took a little doing to get all cabinet members to support the new tax scheme, but said it was always his chief complaint with the provincial government.

Saanich will receive a grant increase to $469,000 from $196,000 in 1977.

Other area districts getting increases include Esquimalt ($5,900 from $3,200), Oak Bay ($8,500 from $2,900) and Sidney ($1,000 from $600).

Deadly Red Tide Hits Island Coast

The federal fisheries department Friday closed the entire east coast of Vancouver Island to shellfish harvesting because of a dangerous and possibly deadly strain of red tide.

Ken Jackson, a spokesman for the department's inspections branch, said that traces of the paralytic shellfish poison had been found in widespread areas.

Areas closed to harvesting of clams, mussels and oysters are the Juan de Fuca Strait, Strait of Georgia and Johnstone Strait from Hardwicke Island in the north to the Canada-United States border.

Jackson said the ban applies to commercial and recreational shellfishing but does not apply to crabs and shrimp which are completely safe.

The fisheries department is testing the areas and safe zones will be declared when found, he added.

On Wednesday, most of Puget Sound in Washington state was closed to shellfish harvesting by red tide.

Gonyaulax is taken in as food by the shellfish but does not affect them, he said, but if eaten by humans it can be harmful and possibly deadly.

Symptoms of the poison, noticed within 10 minutes of ingestion, are tingling of the lips, tongue and inside of the mouth. Later the tingling spreads to fingers and toes and then causes numbness in legs and arms.

He said a doctor should be called as soon as the symptoms are noticed.

Bawlf Charges Feds Stalling

Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf accused the federal government Friday of delaying the salmonid enhancement program and the preservation of the Nitinat Triangle in Pacific Rim National Park.

He said the salmonid enhancement program — expected to double salmon stocks during the next seven years at a cost of $150 million — and approved by the provincial government, has not yet gone to the federal cabinet for approval.

The minister said he told Ottawa a couple of months ago that a suitable time for signing the agreement would be Oct. 16, the day the B.C. government dedicates a part of the Adams River near Kamloops to the late conservationist Roderick Haig-Brown.

He said Ottawa agreed but now informs him that Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc will not attend the ceremonies because he is campaigning in one of the eastern byelections.

"When my staff poked around on that a little they came back to me with the incredible news that LeBlanc's staff doesn't even have the document ready."

Bawlf said the federal government wants to take a second look at a federal-provincial agreement which would provide millions of dollars to compensate the owners of timber and tree licences in the Nitinat Triangle.

"I find that totally unacceptable," Bawlf said. "Two years ago the federal government signed a piece of paper saying that when the nuts and bolts of the compensation program were put together, they would pick up 50 per cent of the cost.

"We have bargained throughout in entirely good faith. We have worked hard to tie up the loose ends, in fact we have done the toughest part of the work. And now to be told at this late hour that they want to take a second look at a legally-signed agreement, well I find this double talk absolutely shocking."

Enrolment Shows Drop

The loss is less than predicted but an even greater decline is expected in 1980 when an exceptionally large Grade 11 class graduates.

Over the next two years the main decreases will be felt in junior secondary schools.

There are 2,072 students in Grade 8 this year, down from 2,238, and next year's class is expected to be even smaller.

Enrolment is also down in Sooke and Saanich school districts. The decline in Sooke is 1.4 per cent and in Saanich it is 0.5 per cent.

E&N DECISION SEEN IMMINENT

A decision on whether to allow CP Rail to discontinue its Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway passenger service is expected within a month from the Canadian Transport Commission.

"We understand the commission is now sitting on the case," said John Cooper, chairman of the Vancouver Island Steering Committee.

"The next 30 days are going to be crucial as to which way it is going to go."

Cooper charged that CP Rail still seemed determined to do nothing to help the service pending the final decision of the commission.

New schedules promised Sept. 1 have yet to materialize, he said.

Cooper said the train carried 2,150 passengers in the first 10 days of this month, topping the figure for the comparative period in July.

Insidious Inflation

Inflation is an insidious monster when it comes to the University of Victoria's operating costs, according to a study by UVic bursar Robert McQueen.

A special report McQueen prepared on non-salary inflation rates in university costs shows why education is so expensive these days.

Examples of inflation in McQueen's report included an 282 per cent increase in the costs of fuel oil and a 90 per cent rise in electricity rates over the last four years.

Fuel oil prices went from 12 cents a gallon in 1974 to 46 cents a gallon in 1978. Electricity rates rose from $10.86 per to $20.62 per 1000 kilowatts in the same time period.

The report was prepared for the UVic board of governors.

—First class postage rates went from eight cents to 14 cents, a 85.5 per cent increase.

—The cost of 100 watt light bulbs rose from 20 cents to 37 cents each, an increase of 85.5 per cent.

—Data processing cards that cost $1.45 per 1000 four years ago cost $2.69 per 1000 today.

McQueens report also says that inflation has dramatically increased the costs of biological supplies.

Glycerin went from $18.81 a gallon to $73.04 a gallon in one year, a 288 per cent increase.

Also in one year, sodium chloride increased from 84 cents a pount to $1.74 a pound, a 107 per cent increase.

Rats could be purchased at $1.51 each two years ago, but now cost $3.10 — an increase of 105 per cent.

Increasing prices, coupled with the decline in value of the Canadian dollar, have resulted in reductions in purchasing power for library books.

In 1974, $1,000 Canadian would buy 72 books published in the United States, in 1978 the same amount of money buys 51 U.S. books; a dcrease of 29 per cent.

With $1,000 Canadian in 1974, the university could buy 120 books from the United Kingdom, in 1978 $1,000 buys 40 books; a decrease of 33 per cent.

Campaigns to cut university costs are dampened by rampant inflation. An energy conservation drive on campus has cut energy consumption by 10 per cent over the last three years, but Hydro rates rose 90 per cent over four years.

Inflation hurts everyone, but at UVic, where the provincial operating grant rose by only 6.9 per cent this year, it's really a tough problem.

New Program Will Liven Newcombe

A program to breathe new life into the provincial museum's Newcombe Auditorium has been launched by the Friends of the Museum.

The Friends are a non-profit organization formed to support the public institution.

The aim of the project is to transform the drab atmosphere of the auditorium and foyer into one that's more exciting with programs that are people-oriented.

The hope is that there will be lots more things to see as well as more museum sponsored activities throughout the year.

Tara Nanavati, an experienced museologist, has been appointed coordinator of the project — a tough assignment but she's confident of success.

"I'm starting from scratch," she said.

She hopes to make the Newcombe an interpretative device for the museum, something which hasn't yet been done by other museums.

"This is quite a new concept," she explained.

"The Newcombe won't be used as a commercial device but as an extension of the museum and its collections."

As an example, she hopes to use a large part of the auditorium's foyer for various exhibitions. The space at present is not being put to any use.

"I also hope to move away from the lecture format, and get more and more into theatre, making maximum use of the stage."

As a start, Nanavati, has already arranged for four interesting programs this month.

The first, entitled Behind Closed Doors, is to help people to get to know their museum. It will be held every Tuesday at 10.30 a.m., starting Oct. 17.

It involves a series of illustrated informal meetings on the museum collection and its functions.

The Oct. 17 meeting will feature a talk by ethnology curator Peter Macnair on Indian silver carving.

On Oct. 24, education chief Shirley Cuthbertson will speak on how to make use of the museum while zoologist Marilyn Lambert will talk on owls on Oct. 31.

Other programs include an illustrated lecture on Oct. 24 at 8 p.m. on Indian use of plants in the Pacific Rim National Park area.

The two speakers are Margaret Norris and Leslie Fenn, students of botany and anthropology, who spent the summer finding out what plants Indians use for food and medicine.

Hilary Stewart, a well known B.C. artist and archaeologist, will present a talk on Indian culture on Oct. 25 at 8 p.m.

The last program of the month will be a silent film series by Charles Hofmann, internationally known film historian. The meetings will be held on Oct. 27-29 at 8 p.m.

The series will include a showing of Douglas Fairbanks in the Thief of Bagdad.

As in old days, Hofmann will play the piano as the films are screened.
